Bar Harbor Afire; Boats Rush to Save Trapped 2000

'Dunkirk' Fleet Ferrying Evacuees To Mainland; Two Main Hotels Burned

Bar Harbor, Me., Oct. 23 (AP).—A Dunkirk-like evacuation of this fire-stricken internationally famous resort town began tonight in fishing craft and other small boats.

Small craft of every description headed for Bar Harbor as word spread that 2000 residents were huddled on the town's docks waiting evacuation by sea, their only escape from the gale-whipped blaze.

The boats carried evacuees across Frenchman Bay to Gouldsboro on the east mainland shore.

Fire in Business District

Even as the small craft began carrying evacuees across the bay, Coast Guard boats, a Navy destroyer escort and other boats of every description were on their way from a dozen New England ports.

Horace A. Hildreth, on the only phone line open, quoted the operator as saying that the plames had reached the business district of the town and that the principal resort hotels—the Malvern and Belmont—were gone.

There were unconfirmed reports that the estat sof Atwater Kent was among the more pretentious summer places burned. The Ford, Rockefeller, and Pulitzer families are among the better known summer residents and Sumner Welles and Lady Eunice Oaes, widow of the slain baronet, Sir Harry Oakes, have estates here.

Hildreth quoted the telephone operator as saying that hundreds of residents had fled by highway, but for others, caught on the other side of the fire, evacuation by sea was the only escape. Bar Harbor has a population of 4300.

Navy Alerts Vessels

Small picket boats and motor lifeboats were sent from surf stations. Larger buoy tenders and inshore craft were sent from Rockland. Ocean-going cutters and a destroyer escort started north from Boston.

The Navy ordered available vessels alerted in port as far south as Newport, R. I.

Many other New England communities were being evacuated tonight as more than 200 forest fires swept the area, but none was in as immediately serious a situation as Bar Harbor.

Shifting, increasing or decreasing winds constantly changed the seriousness of the threats in many spots.

At least three persons were dead and property damage mounted into the millions as the wind-whipped flames spread on this twenty-third day of a dry spell with no rain in sight.

50 Taken From Hospital

At North Reading, Mass., 105 children were carried from a State tuberculosis sanitarium as flames swept so close that the heat of the blaze blistered the paint of the hospital buildings.

At Biddeford, Me., 100 children were taken from the Stella Maris School, and 50 persons were carried from a Biddeford hospital.

Police Probe Figure Fears Wire-Tapping

Dugan Also Reports Anonymous Note in Arlington Case

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

An anonymous letter, a hint of telephone tapping, and court records on past county numbers' cases yesterday highlighted a grand jury investigation of gambling in Arlington County, Va.

Eight witnesses were called before a six-man jury investigating possible collusion of police and gamblers in the county before the jury adjourned for the day at 6:25 p. m. It is scheduled to resume at 10 a. m. today.

'Hear Noises' on Phone

Daniel A. Dugan, member of the Arlington County Board, and one of the chief witnesses yesterday, disclosed that he had presented the letters to the jurors. He also reported the "belief" that his home telephone was being tapped.

Chief instigator of the current investigation, Dugan declined to discuss the contents of the letter, which he said he had received yesterday morning. He did report that the missive was unsigned.

Dugan's wife, contacted at their home, likewise declined to discuss it other than to say it contained "confidential information" for her husband "which would be sensational if revealed."

Records Presented

Both the county board member and his wife expresse dthe opinion their home telephone wire "may be tapped." They reported "hearing noises" they had "never noticed before" during telephone calls yesterday.

Records of criminal cases involving men convicted of gambling charges in Arlington County were reportedly presented to the jurors for their consideration. The records showed that:

Gary Cooper Is Called 'Comrade,' He Learns During Movie Hearing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

European Communists are utilizing Hollywood's most glamorous names in "vicious and ruthless lying propaganda" about the United States, the House Committee on Un-American Activities disclosed yesterday.

Committee evidence comprising documents furnished by the State Department was introduced during the testimony of Gary Cooper, handsome sun-tanned he-man star of the motion pictures.

Cooper Startled

Cooper learned with amazement that Communists in Italy had described him as a fellow "comrade" and that Communists in Yugoslavia had told that country Cooper had been jailed for his leftist views.

Cooper, who had testified firmly that he wanted no part of the "pink mouthings" of any of Hollywood's Communists, was obviously startled when a committee investigator asked him to read the State Department documents.

"Humph," he snorted as he glanced over the papers.

Crabbe Keeps Health

It purported to be a factual account from "the New York paper Red Star" of the Broadway machinegun killing of Buster Crabbe, noted swimming star, by a fascist "KKK gang" led by Senator Bilbo. (The late Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (D., Miss.), then was lying at death's door in a New Orleans hospital.)

With a broad grin, the Montana-born star remarked that not only was Crabbe still alive but,

"Mr. Crabbe is a very healthy specimen."

A committee member said that next week the committee will

Allocation Plan For Materials Seems Certain To Be Presented

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The anti-inflation program which President Truman will present to Congress may involve "selective price control" of key commodities at the producer level, it was indicated last night.

It will certainly include proposals for a return of some allocation controls exercised during wartime, so that Government can direct the flow of specific quantities of key materials.

But, it appeared almost certain that President Truman did not contemplate asking a restoration of either rationing or price control at the consumer level.

Task Is Too Complicated

However effective such processes might be to hold down prices over a long period, the President is said to be convinced that the enormous job of printing ration books, assembling a universal price control policing organization and otherwise setting up the complicated system would take entirely too long to do any good in the immediate situation.

The process could not begin to take effect for six to nine months, it appeared.

Consequently, the President has been looking to other, more immediately useful, devices suggested to him by members of his Cabinet and his Council of Economic Advisors.

Urge Use of Full Power

The council and a majority of his Cabinet have argued that the present crisis, both in respect to price movements and to the foreign aid program, is such that voluntary methods are in themselves insufficient. They have recommended that measures backed by Federal powers of enforcement be called into play.

It was indicated on good authority last night that the Chief Executive has by no means reached firm and detailed conclusions on the measures he wants to put into effect. But the following possibilities have been suggested to him, and he may decide to recommend all or some of them, in combination, to the Congress:

1. The most far reaching and possibly the most effective is Federal price control of certain key commodities — wheat, coal and other items in highest foreign and domestic demand.

These controls would be applied at "early" levels in the economy, that is, at the stage of the first sale from producer to initial processor, or possibly through some part of the processing stages.

But a fixed price would not be set on the item at its final sale

GOP Leaders Set Limits on Cooperation; No 'Rubber Stamp'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congressional Republican leaders, reeling a bit from the President's November 17 special session call, last night guardedly offered: "Cooperation, but no rubber stamp."

Bipartisan cooperation in the special session, they hinted, will be confined pretty much to emergency aid in the western Europe crisis. Even here they may offer a program of their own.

They made no promises whatever on the President's call for anti-inflationary legislation and said the special session cannot be limited to foreign aid and price matters.

"The President didn't ask us to limit it," said Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.). "We have no way of doing so."

Whether Republicans will call up the GOP tax-reduction bill, Martin didn't say. He said this and other questions of party policy will be met later by the GOP steering groups.

On the surface all was harmony at the brief White House conference, but Republican commitments were few and there were veiled hints of "fireworks" at the session to come.

Spokesmen said they were given only one specific interim aid figure by the President—642 million dollars, mainly for stopgap assistance to France and Italy through March 31.

Occupation Aid Also Needed

It was learned that additional aid needed for occupied areas of Germany, Austria and Korea may carry the total over one billion dollars.

No special price proposals were laid down, but both Martin and House Majority Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) said the President indicated opposition to any return to consumer price controls. The only alternative he mentioned, they said, was the need for allocating materials.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley told reporters it was "generally understood" that interim aid for Europe will be the first question considered. He said

Truman Explains Reasons For Special Session Call

The text of a statement by President Truman yesterday announcing he will convene Congress in special session November 17:

I HAVE met this afternoon with a group of congressional leaders.

I presented to them detailed information concerning the alarming and continuing increase in prices in this country and the situation regarding the need for emergency foreign aid.

I informed them that I had concluded it was necessary to convene the Congress on Monday, November 17.

By that date the members of Congress who are now abroad obtaining first-hand information will have returned to the United States.

There are two compelling reasons for convening the Congress at an early date.

It is urgently necessary for the Congress to take legislative action designed to put an end to the continued rise in prices, which is causing hardship to millions of American families and endangering the prosperity and welfare of the entire Nation. When the Congress meets, I shall recommend to it suitable measures for dealing with inflation, high prices, and the high cost of living.

IT IS ALSO necessary for this Government to take adequate steps to meet the crisis in western Europe, where certain countries have exhausted their financial resources and are unable to purchase the food and fuel which are essential if their people are to survive the coming winter.

It now appears that the minimum needs of France can be met with present funds only until about the end of December, and that it will enter the new year without funds to pay for essential imports. Italy's needs are even more immediate, for Italy will require substantial assistance before the end of this year. Moreover it appears that additional funds will be needed to maintain our position in occupied areas. It is clear, therefore, that congressional action cannot be delayed until January.

The convening of the Congress in November will also furnish an opportunity for it to speed up its consideration of the part to be played by the United States in the long-range European recovery program.

I have just signed a proclamation convening the Congress at 12 o'clock noon on Monday, November 17, 1947.

Tomorrow evening, at 10 o'clock, over all the networks, I shall make a radio address to the American people describing the present situation in detail and explaining why action by the Congress is necessary prior to the regularly scheduled session in January.

'Two Compelling Reasons'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday called Congress back for a special session November 17 to act on two grave problems—what he called the "alarming" increase in domestic prices and emergency aid to Europe this winter.

His decision to ask for action on the high cost of living was a closely guarded White House secret up until the hour Mr. Truman disclosed it.

The Chief Executive will make a broadcast over all networks at 10 o'clock tonight. He will then tell the American people in detail about the "two compelling reasons" that led him to call Congress back a month and a half before the regular session in January.

Two Compelling Reasons

Yesterday's action at the White House was in sharp contrast to the indecision that marked a conference between Mr. Truman and leaders of Congress on September 29.

In an hour-long conference with eight Republican and three Democratic leaders yesterday, Mr. Truman informed them that he had decided on the special session.

Then he summoned reporters into his office and read to them a prepared announcement.

"There are two compelling reasons for convening the Congress at an early date," he said.

"Urgently Necessary"

"It is urgently necessary for the Congress to take legislative action designed to put an end to the continued rise in prices, which is causing hardship to millions of American families and endangering the prosperity and welfare of the entire Nation. When the Congress meets, I shall recommend to it suitable measures for dealing with inflation, high prices and the cost of living.

"It is also necessary for this Government to take adequate steps to meet the crisis in western Europe, where certain countries have exhausted their financial resources and are unable to purchase the food and fuel which are essential if their people are to survive the coming winter."

An informed source later estimated that Mr. Truman would

Wheat Belt Drought Poses Export Crisis

Next 2 Weeks to Tell If Goal Has Chance, Experts Predict

By John Ball
Post Reporter

Continuing dry weather in the winter wheat belt is causing grave concern among grain experts, both in and out of Government, over its effect upon the Nation's export program.

The next two weeks, they declare, will decide if there is a possibility to meet even the original goal of 470 million bushels of grain for food deficit countries. And President Truman recently raised that goal to 570 million bushels.

Even if Congress at its coming session votes the money necessary for the proposed program for foreign relief, many predict it will be impossible to get the grain.

Threat to Economy Seen

Further, they add, if the grain is procured through continuation of the present purchasing program, it may be only with extreme danger to domestic supplies and to the national economy. One result they fear is that prices for wheat may soar by May to heretofore undreamed-of heights.

Unless a general rain over the entire winter wheat belt comes within two weeks, they fear that it will be next to impossible to get farmers to cut down their reserves, called in trade parlance, their "carryover," sufficiently to provide enough grain for both foreign goals and domestic use.

In the last two years the Government has been able to meet its commitments for foreign relief,

Thursday Ban On Poultry To Continue

Luckman Denies Plea By Producers; Firm On Liquor Holiday

President Truman's Citizens Food Committee yesterday turned down a request by poultry raisers to discontinue Poultryless Thursdays.

At the same time the committee refused a request of 14 distillers to be allowed to continue making liquor after Saturday night—the date set by the industry for a 60-day shutdown.

In sticking to the original program for Poultryless and Eggless Thursdays, Chairman Charles Luckman of the food group declared that a substitute program offered by the poultrymen "will not adequately serve the purpose of conserving grain."

Luckman quoted from two letters from Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson in retaining Poultryless Thursdays.

"The American people are eating less poultry, and therefore the industry is already breeding and hatching fewer chicks," he said. "The production of poultry has dropped 30 per cent below the birthrate of poultry this time last year. This means a direct saving for the hungry people of Europe."

The plea of 14 small distilleries to continue operations during the 60-day liquor-making holiday was based on "hardship" evidence, Luckman said. That evidence, he found, "did not warrant any deviation from the plan originally agreed upon."

The distillers turned down by a coordinating committee made up of industry, labor and Government officials, included:

U. S. Will Ship No Oil to Russia Under New Quota

The Commerce Department yesterday set an export quota of 12 million barrels of petroleum products for October, November and December, but Russia will get none because she has failed to meet export requirements.

A department official gave the explanation regarding Russia.

The quota is the first established since oil was brought back under export control on last June 30.

When controls were reimposed, a uniform questionnaire was sent to foreign governments. It asked the countries to inform the United States as to what final use the oil would be put, to give figures on their consumption and production and stocks on hand. Russia has not yet answered.

"As the quota established is substantially below estimated export demand, export licenses will be approved only on the basis of urgent need," the department said.

By James F. Byrnes

WHEN WE ARRIVED at the "Little White House" in Babelsberg, the Berlin suburb that had been the center of the German film colony, we learned that Marshal Stalin would be delayed a day. This gave us a chance to do a little sightseeing; the President, Admiral Leahy and I drove into Berlin. We were greatly impressed by the streams of people walking along the road. They were mostly grandparents and children. As a rule they carried their possessions on their backs. We did not know where they were going and it is doubtful that they did, but when we reached Berlin we were convinced they were headed in the wrong direction. Despite all we had read of the destruction there, the extent of the devastation shocked us. It brought home the suffering that total war now visits upon old folks, women and children, besides the men in uniform.

Shortly after his arrival, on July 17, Stalin came to call on the President. We had to remember to call him Generalissimo rather than Marshal Stalin, for he had been accorded the new title in recognition of the Red army's great successes. It was the first time the President and Stalin had met. After a very pleasant conversation, the President quite informally asked Stalin, Molotov and Pavlov, the capable Soviet interpreter, to stay and have lunch with him. They accepted. The conversation was general in nature and cordial in spirit. The President was favorably impressed by Stalin, as I had been at Yalta. In speaking of our visit to Berlin, I asked the Generalissimo his views of how Hitler had died. To my surprise, he said he believed that Hitler was alive and that it was possible he was then either in Spain or Argentina. Some 10 days later I asked him if he had changed his views and he said he had not.

Likes U. S. Wine

At lunch the generalissimo was as entertaining as he usually is on such occasions. He complimented the President on the wine that was served. While the President was thanking him, Stalin asked the Filipino waiter to unwrap the towel from the bottle, because he wanted to see the label. I was glad he did; it was a California wine.

Shortly after lunch, we left for the first of our many 3-mile drives to Potsdam and to Cecilienhof Palace where the meetings were held. As always, when they are hosts, the Russians had made painstaking preparations. Cecilienhof Palace had been the country estate of the former Crown Prince Wilhelm and provided ample accommodations for the conference. It is a two-story brown-stone mansion beautifully situated on Gribnitz Lake. Its four wings form a square with a courtyard in the center, which the Red army had brilliantly

And Still Rising

Prices Up 25% Since V-J Day; Peak Is 7% Higher Than 1920

Consumer prices in Washington and the United States as a whole are at an all-time high.

The President's call for a special session of Congres sat which rising prices will be a major consideration comes following a dizzy spiral of cost of goods and services purchased by moderate income families.

Nationally prices have increased about 25 per cent since VJ-Day, August 14, 1945. The peak, however, is approximately 7 per cent higher than in 1920.

Food, which accounted for 33.5 per cent of the moderate income family budget in August, 1939, accounted for 40.8 per cent in August, 1945, and today nearly 44 per cent, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor.

Retail prices of goods and services in Washington rose 2 per cent between June 15 and August 15, according to figures released yesterday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. There were price advances in all major groups of living essentials.

Statistics since August 15 are not yet available, but there has been no "recession."

With the period 1935-39 considered "100 per cent" for statistical purposes, on August 15 the consumers' price index for Washington stood at 159.1 per cent; 11.6 per cent higher than a year ago

Band of White Men Set Fire To Negro's House in Atlanta

Atlanta, Oct. 23 (AP).—A special police detail was assigned to a northwest Atlanta section today after officers reported a group of white men set fire to a house into which a Negro family had just moved. The house is in a white residential area.

Patrolman R. B. Bibb said the four Negroes in the family locked themselves in the house when the white group congregated. Police had to break doors to evacuate the Negroes. No arrests were made.

Bibb said he and his partner, H. W. Bates, were at the house when the fire started. They reported a white man approached them and asked how long they expected to be there. When the officers replied "probably all night," the man declared "about 200 families of whites living in this neighborhood resent the fact that this Negro family moved in. You may not want to stick around and see what will take place."

Shortly thereafter, the officers said, flames burst from the rear of the house. The officers were in front at the time.

"It was no coincidence," the officers said, "that about 12 or 15 white men were standing around watching the blaze."

Firemen brought the flames under control without serious damage.

Policemen listed the occupants of the house as Clifford L. Walton, 43, his wife, and their two children.

Public Land Holding Review Is Sought

Congress May Be Asked to Set Up Committee at Special Session

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Congress may be asked in its special session to set up a Washington committee to review public land holdings here with an eye to converting some of them to private use.

The proposed study, favored by some high District officials, but not yet formally cleared by the city heads, would be aimed at one of the District's most acute financial problems—the fact that public ownership has claimed more than half the taxable land area here, thus cutting deeply into the city's revenue sources.

The plan is similar to one previously presented to Congress in a bill by Representative Francis Case (R., S. Dak.). There are, however, differences. Representative Case's plan called for a study of the possibility of moving specific institutions, like Soldiers' Home and St. Elizabeths Hospital, to new sites outside the District. The plan favored by local officials would call for a general review of all public land in the District.

Calls for Study

Representative Case's plan called for a study by a committee of officials. Local officials favor having the land review committee include a representative each from the District Government, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the Public Buildings Administration, plus two Washington citizen members.

While this is one of several proposals local officials would like to see cleared by Congress this fall, Commissioner John Russell Young said there were no District bills so urgent they could not wait until the next regular session in January.

This view was shared by Commissioners Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, and Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West.

In high place among the bills on which city officials would like to get an early decision are those to give the Commissioners full control over public welfare matters, and over nonmilitary use of the District Armory.

Bill Passed House

The welfare bill, which would leave the present administrative Board of Public Welfare in a purely advisory role, has passed the House and is awaiting action of the Senate District Committee.

A bill to give the Commissioners control over the nonmilitary use of the Armory and over the income that would come in, has been presented to Congress, but has not yet received attention in the District committees.

Commissioner Young and other officials said it was unlikely that any changes in the District tax setup would be formally proposed to Congress until the city budget goes to the Capitol in January. Adoption of a sales tax and repeal of the city's personal income tax has gained strong support among top District officials.

At the Capitol, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) said he hopes to call a meeting of his sucommittee on District reorganization and home rule when its members return for the special session. He said, however, that formal reorganization legislation would probably wait until next year.

and 61.4 per cent above the August, 1939, level.

In the months that followed the end of World War I on November 11, 1918, prices increased about 27 per cent to reach their peak. Prices then dropped sharply.

From June 15, 1947, to August 15 food prices in Washington increased 3.2 per cent, apparel prices 1.6 per cent, retail price of house furnishings 2.2 per cent, and residential rents 0.4 per cent since rents were last surveyed in February.

From August 15, 1946, to August 15, 1947, food prices here increased 16 per cent on the index; apparel, 16 per cent; fuel, electricity and ice, 6.9 per cent; house furnishings, 22.7 per cent, and miscellaneous items, 7.8 per cent.

The over-all increase from August to August was 11.6 per cent, or the previously mentioned 159.1 per cent of the 1935-39 figure.

U. S. Export Crisis Is Feared From Drought in Wheat Belt

only by reducing the carryover of wheat far below normal. Normally a reserve of 250 million bushels was considered the lowest limit with safety. With increased domestic consumption, due largely to an increase in population of 15 million since 1937, a safe carryover is now set at about 300 million bushels.

Shipments "Made Blind"

In the last two years the bulk of the Government buying has come later in the year—the peak after February 1. By that time, in both years, winter wheat had progressed sufficiently almost to assure a bumper crop. Good rains, with good snow cover, at the right times had provided the moisture needed for high yields. So far that moisture is lacking this year.

This year exports have been speeded up, at the instance of the State Department, to more than double the amount in the same period in the last two years. The shipments have been made without any indication of what next year's crop may be.

The result, wheat men agree, is that next February and the succeeding months until June, may see a wheat shortage unexperienced in this country in years, if in the meantime, wheat prospects do not vastly improve.

Growers will not reduce their carryover unless they see prospects for a good crop. In the crop year ended last June 30 the carryover was cut down to an unprecedented 80 million bushels, only because of the promise of a bumper crop. The same influence was responsible for the Government to induce growers to cut their carryover to 101 million bushels the year before.

Congressional Scrutiny

Already Government and commercial exporters have bought or contracted for between 335 and 340 million bushels of wheat. Of this Government purchases amount to between 260 and 265 million bushels, and commercial acquirements to an additional 75 million.

Grain men expect this vast program will come under close scrutiny when Congress reassembles November 17—particularly from members from grain States.

Total exports since July 1, the beginning of the crop year, already are estimated at about 225 million bushels. On October 1, they stood at 192 million, and an estimated 33 million have been shipped since. A year ago only 97 million bushels had been exported by this date.

All this means that under the maximum Agriculture Department experts fixed as possible to export, or 400 million bushels of wheat plus 70 million bushels of other grains, more than half has already been earmarked and almost half has been shipped.

Fear for Whole Program

These same experts see in this great, early shipment of grain, a danger to the entire export program. The idea for shipping so early compared with previous years has been to provide stockpiles in needy countries from which they can draw during the late winter and spring.

They fear that the foreign countries will not husband their supplies for the spring period of greatest need. Hungry men are prone to eat when food is near. If the stockpiles are used up before spring, it is suggested that, without more available from this country, Europe may turn to other sources for food.

The Agriculture Department's goal of 470 million bushels of grain for export, before it was raised by presidential order to 570 million, was based on the following analysis, contained in the September 11 "Wheat Situation":

"On August 1, wheat production was estimated at 1428 million bushels, the largest in our history.

"Because the corn crop will be small, more wheat will be fed than last year. The amount . . . may reach 325 million bushels.

"For this reason, domestic disappearance of wheat in the 1947-48 marketing year, may total 925 million bushels.

"Since the supply is about 1500 million bushels, about 575 million bushels would be left for export and for carryover July 1, 1948.

"In order to provide a reserve of 175 million bushels for contingencies and carryover, it would be necessary to limit exports to not more than 400 million bushels, or about the same amount as was exported in 1946-47."

Agriculture Department experts have been increasingly reluctant to keep up the present high monthly allocations of grain for export. They urge that the Nation wait a while, and see what nature brings. They are also looking, without too much hope, for results from the food conservation program.

Burning Ship Survivors Sought West of Haiti

Port au Prince, Haiti, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Planes and ships scoured the Caribbean waters west of Haiti today after a Dutch steamer sent an SOS reporting that it was afire and passengers and crewmen were abandoning ship in lifeboats.

The Dutch ship, Koert, listed in shipping registries as a comparatively small craft of 482 tons, radioed that it was aflame 15 miles from the Port au Prince harbor.

It was in Palo Alto, Calif., that the radio distress call was first heard by Mackay Radio, but at evening no trace of the ship—or of lifeboats—had been found. The steamer was outbound from Antigua, British West Indies.

Winter Brings No Coal Shortage, Say Leaders Here

Coal industry leaders, representing producers, shippers, dealers and miners, declared yesterday there was no danger of a general coal shortage this winter.

In a report to Secretary of Interior Krug, however, they advised consumers to buy now, and take any grade and size of coal they can get.

The group met here to advise Krug on fuel prospects. The consensus was that such shortages as existed were localized in the Middle West and related only to high grade coal types.

The problem is primarily one of transportation, they reported.

Importation of Milk to D. C. From Outside Area Authorized

The District Commissioners yesterday authorized importation of milk and cream from areas beyond the Washington milkshed and outside local Health Department supervision.

The emergency order, upon report of an increasing shortage of milk supply here, was made effective "during the present period of shortage, anticipated to extend to February 1, 1948."

It was requested by District Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland, upon report of his chief of service, Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, that the present shortage for District daily requirements has reached 19,000 gallons and can be expected to reach 25,000 gallons.

Won't Affect Prices

Normal daily milk requirements for the District, Dr. Ashworth reported, is 142,000 gallons.

Sole restrictive provision of the Commissioners' order was that such imported milk or cream pass State requirements of the area in which it was produced. In some States, these quality requirements are less stringent than District regulations.

A victory for independent milk distributers here, who are first to suffer the squeeze of short supply, yesterday's order is the first since similar ones issued during wartime shortages.

It will not lower milk prices to the consumers, members of the milk industry here agree.

Transportation costs for whole milk and cream from such areas as Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin have, in past experience, more than made up the cost differential of products from those lower cost areas, local suppliers said.

Dr. Ashworth's report to the District Health Office disclosed that on October 1 milk production in the Washington milkshed had passed its seasonal surplus stage and was down to the District's normal daily requirements of 142,000 gallons.

By October 21 (Tuesday), he said, the supply was down to 125,000 gallons. He estimated the supply had dropped another 2000 gallons between that last report period and yesterday.

Variety of Factors

Dr. Ashworth listed as factors of the shortage: seasonal conditions, a recent drought and the destruction of grain by early frosts; the current high cost of feed for milk cattle, and the high replacement cost of milch cows, which he noted now cost $300.

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., which supplies local distributers an estimated 90 per cent of milk sold here, estimated that their production has dropped 10 per cent since October 1.

Derrick said the association is currently supplying all demands by buying outside the Washington milkshed, from the Harrisonburg, Va., area. He said it was usual practice for the producers to buy outside when their own supply sources were insufficient.

Such milk purchases, he emphasized, all meet District health requirements and are passed by District inspectors.

Emergency Declared In Chilean Copper Mines

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—A state of emergency has been declared in the copper mines and nitrate fields of northern Chile where Communists are planning to carry out their plans to disrupt national production by means of strikes, it was announced today.

The giant American-owned open-pit copper mines at Chuquicamata, as well as the nitrate fields of Maria Elena and Pedro Valdivia of the U. S. controlled Lautaro Corporation and Anglo-Chilean Nitrate Company, were placed under army protection at dawn today.

Storm Moves Toward Alaska and Canada

Seattle, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—A storm of hurricane intensity with wind velocities over 100 miles an hour was moving toward the mainland of Alaska and British Columbia tonight.

Weather bureau officials in Seattle said the storm center was approximately 400 miles west of Queen Charlotte Island on the Britain Columbia coast and the rim of the disturbance already was lashing the Ketchikan, Alaska, area with 50-mile-an-hour winds.

Businessmen to Hold Virginia Beach Session

Virginia Beach, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Two hundred and fifty leaders from 30 States have registered for the thirteenth Institute on Industrial Relations sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers here October 27 to 31.

Call to Congress Favorably Received

Only Faint Rumbling of Opposition; Taft Accepts Emphasis on Crisis

President Truman's November 17 special session call yesterday received general support in Congress and across the country but there were rumblings of some Congressional opposition.

Warren R. Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations, called it a "very important part of our effort for peace." He said the move to meet European needs "confirms the devotion of the United States to constructive programs for peace."

At Albany, N. Y., Gov. Thomas E. Dewey said he would have no comment on the special session call but some leaders of his party in Congress termed it "warranted."

Taft Doesn't Object

Senate Republican Steersman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), en route back to Ohio, sent word to newsmen that "I certainly don't object." He said the President "emphasized upon us that this was a crisis."

One of the first congratulatory messages to reach the White House was a telegram from the Americans for Democratic Action, signed by Wilson W. Wyatt, former Housing Expediter; Leon Henderson, former head of the OPA, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

"We sincerely hope," the telegram said, "that your Administration will present to Congress a bold and forthright program asking for the imposition of price controls, rationing or whatever measures are needed to assure a domestic stability and generous assistance to western Europe. The Nation will not tolerate political bickering now that the proportions of the world crisis have been revealed."

The National Farmers' Union sent the President a telegram congratulating him on his "courageous action" and said that he had "acted the role of a world statesman in taking this step."

Italian Ambassador Alberto Tarchiani hailed the President's decision as an "important step" indicating that the United States wishes to help hungry Europe.

The Ambassador expressed the hope that "Congress will act with full realization of such needs, showing again the great generosity that has inspired its actions in the past."

Representative Halleck (R., Ind.), House majority leader, referring to Mr. Truman's request for 642 million dollars in emergency relief to tide Italy and France over until next March 31, commented: "There will be some holes shot in those figures before the shooting is over.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) said he had been surprised at Mr. Truman's decision to bring up the matter of prices as well as foreign help at the special session.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) termed the President's action "well warranted." He said grain prices are "obviously getting out of hand."

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said he hopes the President will ask Congress to restore price controls and rationing.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) who previously opposed a special session, said he now believes it is "a good idea."

A note of opposition was sounded by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) who told reporters that a special session could have been "short-circuited" if Mr. Truman had just passed his recommendations along to the legislative committees and let them go to work on the facts.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said: "An important job has to be done and I'm glad Congress has been called to do it."

Director Jack Kroll of the CIO Political Action Committee said congressional action should "take the form of immediate restoration of price controls until the crisis has passed and our economy is once again on an even kell."

Kroll urged legislators not to "take this opportunity to ram through another tax-cut bill or other pet proposals of a partisan nature."

McCarran Regrets It

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) said he is "very sorry that President Truman has called a special session of Congress."

"The session will result only in protracted discussion of the subject of European aid now under study by the various committees of Congress," he said in an interview. He added, however, there is "a good reason for a session of Congress . . . It will enable us to enact as speedily as possible a universal military training law.

Senator Malone (R., Nev.): "We'll come back and get into this thing and try to make some sense out of it. It does not many any sense up to date."

have to ask Congress for slightly more than a billion dollars for Europe. Most of this would go to France and Italy and would be expected to keep them in food and fuel to March 31.

For a time, the prospect of a Capitol Hill debate on high prices alarmed some Administration officials. They used it as an argument against a special session. They feared that a partisan row on the subject might endanger stop-gap aid to Europe and perhaps the long-range Marshall Plan itself.

U. S. Sentiment Reflected

Meantime, however, there was grumbling throughout the United States over the idea of helping Europe when Americans themselves were burdened by high prices, especially in the matter of food.

Mr. Truman's action in coupling high prices and European aid in his call for a special session reflected this sentiment.

As Speaker Joseph W. Martin emerged from yesterday's White House conference, and was surrounded by reporters, he said in connection with the special session: "The President did it on his own."

That was one of the things that made the atmosphere at the White House yesterday so greatly different from what it was on September 29, when Mr. Truman first called in congressional leaders on the European crisis.

On that earlier occasion, he took the position that a special session depended on the attitude of Congress. He only went so far as to ask four congressional committees to meet as soon as possible.

Talking to reporters at that time, Mr. Truman said that if the members of these committees were wholeheartedly in favor of a special session, there would be no difficulty. But if they were not in favor of a special session, he said, there would be no use in calling one.

Somewhere along the line, Mr. Truman abandoned that kind of reasoning. Yesterday he took full responsibility and simply informed the leaders of Congress that he had decided to call a special session. The official proclamation for it already had been drawn up.

Immediate Needs Cited

Mr. Truman also decided to ignore the advice of those who argued that ways and means could be found to keep France and Italy going until Congress could act in the regular January session.

"It now appears," he said, "that the minimum needs of France can be met with present funds only until about the end of December. . . . Italy's needs are even more immediate . . . "

It was clear to him, Mr. Truman said, that "congressional action cannot be delayed until January."

He pointed out, too, that Congress by coming back early will be able to speed up its consideration of the part to be played by the United States in the long-range European recovery program (Marshall Plan).

Estimate Broken Down

The estimate of slightly more than a billion dollars for stop-gap aid, put out by an informed source, was broken down as follows:

For France, 357 million dollars; for Italy 285 million dollars; for Army occupation costs, approximately 400 million dollars (including the cost of taking over the British burden in Germany), and for Austria, between 20 million dollars and 30 million dollars.

The money for France and Italy would be in addition to dollars that have been supplied them up to now through various methods, such as the division of a gold hoard captured from the Nazis.

Italian Industries Get 36.5 Million in Loans

The Export-Import Bank yesterday granted another $36,500,000 in loans to Italian industries, including some leading iron and steel mills.

This brought to $97,300,000 the total credits granted from 100 million dollars which the bank earmarked in January to restore Italian industry and foreign trade.

Italian iron and steel mills are to get $14,500,000 to buy coal and oil and equipment in the United States to increase their production.

Atom Commission Blueprints Found On Home Lawn

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Blueprints labeled "Confidential, property of Atomac Energy Commission," were found on the lawn of a home here today and turned over to police.

Police Chief C. H. Anderson said the blueprints were brought to his office by Mrs. Seymour Thomas, who said her son discovered them. Noting they were stamped "Atomic Energy Commission," she immediately rushed to the police department with them.

Anderson said the documents included floor plans, designs of a chemical laboratory and machine shops.

Each page of the documents was stamped:

"This document contains confidential information essential to the Government."

1½ Billion Child Help Asked

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Chester Bowles, chairman of United Nations Advisory Committee for Children, reported today that the world's undernourished children need $1,470,000,000 in aid during the next six months.

Bowles

Bowles said the figure would provide one supplementary meal a day for the 230 million children who could be reached if the aid were available.

He renewed his appeal that people throughout the world contribute part of a day's pay, or a day's production, to the children's fund.

"Next year is Leap Year," Bowles said. "Instead of the normal 365 days, there will be one additional day. If the millions of people throughout the world who grasp the meaning of what we are trying to do will give that day to the coming generation, it will be a vitally important occasion in world history."

Bowles conceded, however, that persons in poorer nations may be able to contribute only part of a day's pay. He told a news conference that individuals should bypass their governments to contribute to the fund.

"The six-month-old infant lying in a pile of rags in Salonika, Greece, has no quarrel with the tubercular child in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia," Bowles said. "There is no 'cold war' between the world's children."

Reds Hold First Mass Trial of War Criminals

Berlin, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—The first mass trial of German war criminals before a Soviet military tribunal opened today in Berlin, where 16 former Sachsenhausen concentration camp officials were charged with murdering tens of thousands of Soviet and Allied war prisoners.

S.S. Col. Anton Kaindl, former commandant of the camp, was chief defendant. He and his associates face a maximum penalty of 25 years imprisonment since Russia recently abolished the death penalty.

Slump in Grain Market

The day was marked by a slump in the grain market. But before the slump took place, December wheat futures had already reached a new 30-year high for any bread cereal at $3.12¾. Wheat futures have sold above that point only twice before, on May 10 and 11, 1917. In the cash market, wheat brought $3.17½, a new peak for cash wheat since 1920. The market closed slightly under Wednesday's close.

Another step in support of the food conservation program was taken by the Commerce Department, when it ordered an embargo on malt exports.

The action was taken at the request of the brewing industry, which has agreed to reduce its production in an effort to save three million bushels of grain in the next three months.

The brewers objected to shipments of malt to foreign countries which might use it for making beer and ale while such production is restricted here. Since no export quotas were announced, the action amounts to a complete embargo.

Jap Admiral Convicted Of Wartime Atrocities

Guam, Oct. 23 (AP). — A United States military commission convicted Rear Admiral Shimpei Asano and five subordinates today of wartime atrocities against captured American fliers on Truk Atoll.

Attention at their month-long trial centered on Surgeon Comdr. Shisato Ueno, who performed a brutal operation on the body of an injured American flier. After the "experiment" was completed, the American was beheaded by Lieut. (jg.) Takeshi Eriguchi, another defendant. Another flier was tied to a wooden cross and stabbed to death by Petty Officer Sueta Tanaka.

Threat of Aggression Expensive for Turkey

Los Angeles, Oct. 23 (AP).—The threat of Russian aggression is forcing Turkey to maintain an armed force far larger than she can afford, Gen. Salih Omurtak, chief of the Turkish general staff, said today.

American military equipment now is pouring into Turkey under a 100-million-dollar loan authorized by the United States Congress, General Omurtak told newsmen on his arrival here with his staff on a tour of military installations and industrial plants.

Special Session Is 26th in History

First Call Was Issued by Adams in 1797 With Roosevelt Making Last One in 1939

The special session of Congress called by President Truman yesterday for November 17 will be the 26th in United States history.

The first such extraordinary session was called March 25, 1797, by President Adams to suspend diplomatic relations with France. The last before the one called yesterday was convened September 21, 1939, by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to repeal the 1935 neutrality law at the outbreak of World War II.

Presidents Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt were leading special session callers, with three each. Runners-up were Jefferson, Madison, Hayes, Taft and Harding, with two each.

Historic Special Sessions

Among historic special sessions were those called by:

President Madison for November 4, 1811, to consider relations with and eventually declare war on Great Britain.

President Lincoln for July 4, 1861, to consider "insurrection in certain Southern States."

President Wilson for April 2, 1917, to declare war on Germany.

President Roosevelt for March 9, 1933, to take measures to relieve the depression and to consider banking, industry, labor and agriculture.

Something like precedent for President Truman's call was set by President Wilson May 7, 1919, when he called a special session for May 19 to do something about the high cost of living. It is not recorded that Congress was successful in that instance.

1841 Session Longest

The longest special session was that called by President William Henry Harrison for May 31, 1841, to consider the condition of finances and revenue, which remained in session 269 days. President Harrison died in the meantime and John Tyler was President when it adjourned.

The shortest session was a 10-day quickie staged by the thirty-fourth Congress beginning August 21, 1856, at the call of President Pierce. Its job was to pass an appropriation bill for the Army, which the previous regular session had failed to do.

The longest time between special sessions was the 22-year stretch from 1815 to 1837. The shortest interval was the 19 months between April, 1921, and November, 1922.

There have been two cases of Presidents calling extraordinary sessions when the opposition party controlled Congress, as is now the case. Both were called in the year before a national election and in both instances the administration party was defeated at the polls the following year.

Wilson Acted by Cable

In 1911 President Taft called a special session to act on his reciprocity agreement with Canada. Although the House was Democratic, the agreement was approved after four months of debate, only to be rejected by the voters of Canada.

In 1919, President Wilson called a special session by cable from Paris because a filibuster at the close of the sixty-fifth Congress had prevented passage of six major apropriation bills. The new Congress, controlled by Republicans, ripped the Administration's domestic program to shreds and ended finally by rejecting the Versailles Treaty.

Special sessions not already mentioned were those called by:

President Jefferson for October 17, 1803, on the cession of Louisiana by Spain to France.

British Issue in 1807

President Jefferson for October 26, 1807, to consider relations with Great Britain.

President Madison for September 19, 1814, on the war with England.

President VanBuren for September 4, 1837, for suspension of specie payments.

President Hayes for October 15, 1877, to remedy failure of the previous session to make appropriations for the Army.

President Hayes for March 18, 1879, because of the failure of the previous session to appropriate for legislative, executive, judicial and Army expenses.

President Cleveland for August 7, 1893, to repeal the silver purchase act.

Other Special Sessions

President McKinley for March 15, 1897, to enact the Dingley tariff Act.

President Theodore Roosevelt for November 9, 1903, to consider a commercial treaty with Cuba.

President Taft for March 15, 1909, to revise the Dingley Tariff Act.

President Wilson for April 7, 1913, to consider currency reform and the Federal Reserve Act.

President Harding for April 11, 1921, to consider an emergency agricultural tariff.

President Harding for November 20, 1922, to consider an increased and independent merchant marine.

President Hoover for April 15, 1929, for farm relief and tariff changes.

President Roosevelt for November 15, 1937, to consider measures to combat the recession.

Chinese Communists In New Offensive

Peiping, China, Oct. 23. (U.P.)—Chinese communist troops reportedly opened a new offensive in the coal region northwest of Mukden today as bitter fighting in the Changchun-Kirin area continued unabated.

Dispatches from Mukden said 10,000 communist troops hammering at the Fuhsin coal mines 65 miles northwest of Mukden were joined by another large force and swung southwestward to attack another coal mining area at Peipiao.

Woman Among ELAS Members Executed

Athens, Oct. 23 (U.P.)—Twenty-four members of the antigovernment organization ELAS were executed at Salonika today, raising the execution toll in that city to 47 since last Saturday. Among those executed today was one woman, the Ministry of Press said.

Premier Themistocles Sophoulis confirmed reports that American Army liaison officers would be sent to work in the field with Greek army units. This decision resulted from the recent visit here of Maj. Gen. Stephen Chamberlin, U. S. Army intelligence chief.

GOP Offers Cooperation, No Rubber Stamp

it was "simpler" and obviously not as controversial price legislation.

It was learned that Halleck raised this question at the White House conference. Noting that the President listed price action first in his statement, Halleck is said to have warned that if price measures were considered first it might endanger the whole foreign aid program.

It was Halleck who later told newsmen there would be bipartisan cooperation on foreign aid measures "but without any rubber stamps or blank checks."

Asked if Republicans would present a foreign aid program of their own, Martin said there is "better than a faint chance that they will." He commented that the Republican-controlled Herter committee on foreign economic aid will make its own recommendations to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The most hopeful cooperative note was struck by Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) and Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.), chairman and ranking minority member respectively of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

To Speed Hearings

Bloom said he and Eaton had agreed to speed House interim aid hearings "even if it means day and night sessions" in an effort to clear an aid authorization bill during the week before Congress returns. Both the House Foreign Affairs and the Senate Foreign Relations Committees will meet November 10.

In Grand Rapids, Mich., Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), however, voiced doubt that "adequate committee exploration can be made in one week."

Vandenberg, detained in Michigan by his wife's illness, said he hoped the Administration would be prepared to "submit a specific program on the Marshall Plan."

"I am sure congressional committees will make a good effort to obtain support in time for the special session," he said.

It was noteworthy, that the aid authorization bill must be followed by a specific appropriation measure. The House Appropriations Committee must pass first on the appropriation. Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) as yet has not called his committee.

Neither the Banking and Currency committees, which would consider any price control legislation, or the Judiciary committees, which would have control of legislation allocating materials, have been called back.

House Banking Chairman Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.), who attended the White House conference, said no call would be issued "until we know what the price program is." The President told Wolcott he and other chairmen affected would be called in for a look at the price proposals before they were submitted.

Wolcott agreed with Martin and Halleck that the President barred price controls.

"He said we couldn't resume price controls," said Wolcott. "I took that to mean he wouldn't want price control at any level, producer or consumer. You can't have one without the other."

In discussing allocation of materials, Wolcott said the President mentioned building materials and steel but didn't say how they could be allocated to curb prices.

Leaders, who in no event had expected Congress to be convened before December 1, all seemed a little stunned by the November 17 call. A rush started to cancel late November dates and speaking engagements.

Senate Republican Steersman Robert A. Taft (Ohio), for one, had planned a late November speaking swing through the Southwest. Taft, due to announce his presidential intentions today, left the conference early to hop an Ohio-bound plane.

Taft earlier had put the special session decision strictly up to the President, saying Mr. Truman was the one who had the foreign policy facts and the constitutional responsibility for calling Congress back. Hhe said he knew of no reason for convening Congress on "domestic policy," however.

At a press conference just before the White House parley, Taft said his party could give "no assurance" that a special session would be limited to the subjects for which it was called.

"Once a special session convenes, it will be open to everything," he said. "It would be like moving up the regular session a month. Anyone could offer any motion he wanted. We couldn't limit it."

Apparently confident that Congress would not be summoned, Taft recalled his Boise, Idaho, suggestion that "some ingenious person" could find the funds to tide over the European emergency without a special session.

The Ohioan was asked what "top" he would place on foreign aid, including long range (Marshall Plan) assistance.

"We are now providing at a rate of about 4½ billion dollars a year," he replied. "I don't think we would want to go above that rate. I don't say I will want to go that high."

Senate Minority Leader Barkley told newsmen none of the conferees raised any objections to the November 17 call.

"Of course nobody was enthusiastic about it," Barkley added. "I know I wasn't and I don't think the President was. We just recognized it as something that had to be done."

Speaker Martin told reporters the President had already determined to call Congress when the leaders were called "and he has that right." Martin added:

"We are very happy to come back whenever the Presdient wants us. We will give full consideration to anything he recommneds. I am sure we will have all of our committees back."

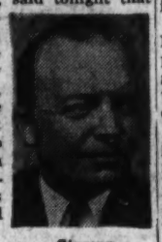
Stassen Asks Revised U. S. Fiscal Policy

Maplewood, N. J., Oct. 23 (U.P.)—Harold E. Stassen, avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said tonight that the Government "can and should" revise its fiscal policy to reduce taxes, balance the 1948 budget and provide up to six billion dollars in annual payments to aid "world economy."



Stassen

The former Governor in an address before the Civic Association here, called for Federal action on seven aspects of Government finances.

Stassen said the United States is about to embark on "one of the most significant endeavors of all history—a program of aiding in the rebuilding and redevelopment of the world."

Outlines Program

"This is an appropriate time," he said, "for us to begin discussion, preliminary to congressional action, of the manner in which this extensive program should be conducted."

He recommended:

1. A tax reduction of approximately three billion dollars annually from "excessive wartime peaks."

2. Payment of approximately three billion dollars on the war debt, plus interest.

Aid to World Economy

3. Current payment of "the net cost of our entire investment and aid in the world economy" to the extent of five billion dollars to six billion dollars annually.

4. Obtain from private sources, the World Bank and Export-Import Bank any necessary additional sums for capital goods and expenditures in other countries.

5. Maintain excellent military strength, with emphasis on research and air power.

6. Initiate strict economy in all other activities of the Federal Government.

7. Establish a balanced 1948 Federal budget.

"Each of these measures is attainable," Stassen said. "Each is essential for a sound and dynamic policy for America."

Study to Be Made Of Latin-America Food

The Food and Agriculture Organization announced today that three representatives will leave this week for Latin America to study means by which the FAO can further help Latin-American countries on national food problems.

Members of the group are Angel G. Sandoval of Honduras; Oswaldo J. Castro of Ecuador, and William G. Casseres of Costa Rica. They will meet with officials of all Latin-American countries.

Price Control at Producer Level Is Likely to the consumer, as was the case in the OPA system.

Commodity Allocation

2. A widely urged step, and one which Mr. Truman apparently stressed in his conversations yesterday with congressional leaders, is allocations of key commodities.

This method involves passage of laws to give the Administration power to say how much of any given item—industrial or agricultural—shall be set aside to go to different classes of consumers.

Thus, the Government would prescribe that so much iron should go to certain steel products, and how much of those products should be exported or sold to different industries.

The allocations under such a plan would obviously not be applied to all the hundreds of thousands of American products, but only to those of basic importance to the domestic economy and to the foreign aid program.

May Regulate Wheat

3. The President may ask for power to regulate use of wheat in the brewing, distilling and milling industries.

4. Another power, also of particular effect on saving wheat and other cereals, relates to the marketing of cattle and hogs. Given the authority by Congress, the Government could forbid or penalize the selling of overweight animals.

5. Since one of the most important factors in currently boosting prices is considered to be speculation in the commodities markets, the President may ask for laws controlling this process. By various regulations, the Government could minimize speculators' gambling in major food items. One simple step would be increasing margin requirements in commodities trading.

6. The President may ask Congress to extend certain powers now slated to expire. These are Government controls over exports, due to cease early next year, and power to restrict consumer credit—installment buying—scheduled to expire next month.

Extension of both those powers would not help the present situation particularly. They would merely help prevent the price situation from growing any worse. They would, in effect, stop the addition of further inflationary forces in the economy.

Opposed to Tax Cuts

7. Reduction in taxes is also considered as having inflationary effect, and accordingly the President may include in his recommendations an appeal not to cut them for the time being.

None of these measures, with the possible exception of the first, requires elaborate administrative machinery or the setting up of big new Federal agencies. Further, all of them are capable of being put into effect in a relatively short period of time.

Even selective price control is thought to be operable in short order and with a minimum of personnel—nothing like the huge organization required by OPA.

The various allocation and regulation measures being considered by the President do not directly stop the upward surge of prices. But insofar as they limit the bidders for each commodity and restrict the amounts which can go to each user, they relieve the competitive pressure which is now driving prices higher and higher.

Membership Drive By Junior Board

The Washington Junior Board of Commerce kicked off its annual membership drive at the weekly Jaycee luncheon at the Burlington Hotel today with a plea by Membership Committee Chairman Paul Hawkins for at least 500 new members.

The drive for new Jaycees will last from October 23 through November 6, with a $200 combination radio-phonograph awarded to the Jaycee bringing in most members.

Names Used In Propaganda

make public evidence that a group of Hollywood personalities have been in direct communication with Soviet consular officers and have acted upon specific orders from Moscow.

Actors Robert Montgomery, Ronald Reagen and George Murphy were others in the all-star cast which held a capacity crowd enthralled yesterday.

The three, who have all been presidents of the Screen Actors Guild, emphasized the fact that the Communists in Hollywood are in a very small minority of about 1 per cent.

They were disturbed, they said, lest the impression be given that a minority in Hollywood is battling against a Communist majority when actually it is precisely the other way around.

Montgomery Applauded

Actor-director-producer Montgomery, serious and well informed, told the committee how the Screen Actors Guild of which he was president passed by an overwhelming majority a resolution condemning communism and fascism.

The former World War II naval officer evoked the loudest applause of the day when he said:

"I gave up my job, like millions of others to fight against a totalitarianism called fascism. I am quite willing to give it up again to fight against a totalitarianism called Communism."

Reagan, handsome boyish-looking movie hero, present president of the Screen Actors Guild, agreed with Montgomery that his Guild had done a superb job in fighting off attempts of a minority to control it.

Jefferson Quoted

At the end of his testimony he asked permission to make a statement.

Films Had Character Unpopular in Russia

Leo McCarey, director of the motion pictures "Bells of St. Marys" and "Going My Way," was asked in the Communist investigation yesterday whether those pictures were popular in Russia.

"We haven't received 1 ruble from there," McCarey replied.

"Why?" asked Chief Investigator Robert E. Shipling.

"Because there was a character that wasn't popular."

"Who? Bing Crosby?"

"No—God," McCarey explained.

"I abhor the Communist philosophy," he declared, "but more than that I detest their tactics, which are the tactics of a fifth column. However, as a citizen I hope that we never are prompted by fear or resentment of Communism into compromising any of our democratic principles in order to fight it."

The best way to combat Communism is "to make democracy work," Reagan said, and added that Jefferson had expressed it, "If all of the American people know all of the facts, they'll never make a mistake."

Red Tactics Denounced

George L. Murphy, actor-dancer and past president of the Actors Guild, told the committee that anti-Communists in the Screen Actors Guild can always count on a 90 to 97 per cent majority of the vote on policy issues. The Communists, he said, employ the tactics of character assassination and the smear on anyone they consider an enemy.

All three said they believed that Communist Party an agent of a foreign government.

They agreed that the party should be outlawed if the Government can establish the links with a foreign power.

The Yugoslav scenario went like this (incidentally it said American newspaper agencies "did not speak"):

Crabbe organized "a movement in the Army to protest against the investigation of un-American Activities against Cooper, Chaplin and other film stars."

He found documents to prove "the criminal and aggressive plans of reactionary circles in America."

He and the "well known leftist film actor, Spencer Tracy," talked with Tyrone Power. Then Power, Cooper and Crabbe consulted Henry Wallace in New York.

Thrilling Scenario

Crabbe wanted to show the results of his discovery to Mr. Truman in Washington but "Mr. Truman would not receive him."

Then Crabbs, in accordance with Wallace, Elliott Roosevelt, Eleanor Roosevelt, LaGuardia and Stettinius, decided to publish the documents."

It seems that plotting against this group were Sumner Welles, "well-known secretary for foreign affairs and propagator of the Truman doctrine, the Senator Bilbo, with a bad reputation for racial theory, persecution of Negroes and inspirator of the KKK."

These two openly advised Crabbe to stop his work, "for which he was not invited to carry on," but Crabbe refused.

So on June 3, (1947) on Broadway, "on the corner of 7th ave, Crabbe was riddled with bullets from a machinegun from a closed car."

Quite a Funeral, Too

Crabbe's death provoked "terrific unrest in Hollywood."

"At the funeral of Buster Crabbe, 150,000 men were present, and the coffin was carried by Comrades Gary Cooper, Tyrone Power, George Brent and Al St. John."

Said the leaflet which was printed in all Communist newspapers:

"This case is very characteristic of the conditions which are now prevailing in the United States. This is the method of Fascist liquidation which this country of 'Freedom and Democracy' is dealing to a political opponent."

Well, after the funeral Cooper, Tyrone Power and Alan Ladd wound up in jail, according to the Yugoslav document.

No Reflection Meant

But from behind these iron bars, Cooper said, according to Tito's boys, "I will go to prison, but I will come back from prison, and Bilbo, William Hearst, Baruch and Rockefeller will not be for long masters of this country."

Some motion picture experts said that obviously the Communists picked on the glamour stars with whom they thought most of Yugoslavia would be familiar. Crabbe's European following comes from his feats as a swimming and adventure picture star.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) assured Cooper that the committee put the documents in the record merely to show how Communists were attempting to utilize Hollywood names in their world-wide campaign and not with any suggestion at all of reflecting on the innocent victims of the "vicious campaign."

Never in Philadelphia

Cooper also learned with surprise and obvious amusement that in Italy the Communist Party distributed a document in May, 1947, referring to him as a Communist "comrade."

He was described as a leader in the fight for the "independence of Spain," and was said to have addressed a crowd of 90,000 persons in Philadelphia "on the occasion of the consecration of the banner of the Philadelphia Communist Federation."

Asked to comment, Cooper remarked that he had never been in Philadelphia.

The Italians were told that Cooper said on this occasion, "In our days it is the greatest honor to be a Communist."

Woman-Hater Sister Gives Dentist a Pain

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Blonde Shirley Chapin, 32 and unmarried, said "I hate women" when she appeared in Magistrate's Court today on a charge of disorderly conduct brought by her bachelor brother, who said his sister was over-zealous in protecting him from the fair sex.

Miss Chapin

Police said Dr. J. S. Chapin, 40, a dentist, told them last night in lodging the charge that his pretty sister selected his female patients and ordered from the office women she thought were inappropriately dressed for a professional call.

Moreover, she made him cross the street when a pretty girl approached and snapped off the radio when he tuned in on soap operas with love interest.

The doctor told them, police said, that his paitence finally snapped and he preferred the charge when Shirley sent several women from his office last night.

Magistrate Henry A. Soffer suggested to Miss Chapin that she be examined by a psychiatrist.

"I'll submit myself to an examination by a psychiatrist if he will," she said. "I want a lawyer. I want to make him suffer like I did. I hate women!"

The magistrate then set November 5 as the date for a further hearing and told the young woman he would release her in her own custody provided she kept away from her brother until the hearing and stayed with a woman friend of the family, Miss Chapin agreed.

She had been held by police overnight in $500 bail.

Dr. Chapin told reporters following the hearing that he had cared for his sister since their parents died a number of years ago.

"I have been a better brother to her than any husband has even been to a wife," he said last night. "Florida vacations, evenings out—why, I even bought her a mink coat!

"My sister has taken undue care to see that I do not fall into the hands of unscrupulous females."

The little Maine towns of Brownfield, East Brownfield and West Newfield were evacuated as the flames advanced.

Flames crept within 2 miles of Bar Harbor, fashionable Maine summer resort, and many all-year residents in adjoining Hull's Cove fled their homes.

Soviet Attitude on Treaty Revealed Early, Byrnes Says

carpeted with a 24-foot-wide Red star of geraniums. Each head of government was provided with a suite of rooms for his personal use and each delegation had a conference room and offices for its staff.

The conference room itself was impressively large and pleasantly bright. At one end a huge window reached up the full two-story height of the room, letting in light and giving the conferees a sweeping view of beautifully landscaped gardens.

The group that sat down at the large oaken table at 5:10 p. m. on July 17 included, besides the President and me, former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, Admiral Leahy and Chip Bohlen from the United States delegation; Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, Mr. Attlee, Sir Alexander Cadogan and an interpreter from the United Kingdom delegation; and from the Soviet Union, Generalissimo Stalin, Foreign Minister Molotov, Mr. Vyshinski, Mr. Andrei A. Gromyko, who was then the Soviet Ambassador in the United States; the Soviet Ambassador to Great Britain, F. T. Gousev, and Mr. Pavlov.

It was fortunate that the room was large because each of these delegations had grouped behind them other members of their delegations. This group would change as various issues before the conference called for the aid of different technical advisers. As I recall it, our delegation that opening day included Ambassador Averell Harriman, Undersecretary William L. Clayton, Reparations Commissioner Edwin W. Pauley, Counselor Ben Cohen, Assistant Secretary of State James C. Dunn and Doc Matthews.

AT STALIN'S suggestion, President Truman was made chairman and he immediately presented for consideration some of the proposals we had prepared aboard the Augusta. It was evident that the other heads of government appreciated the President's efforts in having proposals ready for discussion.

Ben Cohen and I prepared the plan for the creation of the Council of Foreign Ministers. When I presented it to President Truman for his consideration, we suspected what later we found to be true: the Soviet Union did not wish to act promptly on a German treaty. We knew that because of the many serious problems presented, and because there was no German government, some delay was inevitable. But we thought a start should be made promptly and that our experience with the Italian and Balkan treaties would make it easier for us to agree on Germany's problems.

I visualized for him the council's operation, in these terms: The council would consider first the treaties with Italy and the Balkan enemy states because these were the least controversial. The Foreign Ministers would agree on certain general principles and appoint deputies to draft treaties based on these principles. The Foreign Ministers, shortly thereafter, would take up the German treaty, agree on fundamental problems such as frontiers and local governments, and then appoint different deputies to begin drafting a German settlement. The peace treaties based on these general agreements would then be presented to all the United Nations for their consideration and amendment in the same way the Dumbarton Oaks proposals were reviewed at the San Francisco Conference. A similar course ultimately would be followed for Japan.

Plan Approved

After consideration, the President approved the plan. This was shortly before I became Secretary of State. The President submitted our memorandum to the State Department for comment. The Department officials had been thinking along similar lines and recommended the procedure.

It was a good theory. But it was faulty in one assumption. I had assumed that at the end of hostilities an era of peace would be so deeply desired by those nations that had fought the war in unity that the inevitable differences of opinion could be resolved without serious difficulty.

It is true that following Yalta we had been somewhat disillusioned. Such things as the Bern incident and the Soviet violation of the agreements on Poland and Romania warned us that in the days to come we would encounter serious differences and would have to overcome deep-seated suspicion. However, fresh in our minds were the words of President Roosevelt's last message to Prime Minister Churchill, based upon his experience with the Russians, that such difficulties would staighten out.

TODAY IT IS easy for one to say that President Roosevelt's advice and our assumption were not warranted. It is a trite but true statement that "hindsight is better than foresight." But, if one can recall the attitude of the people of the United States toward the Soviets in the days immediately following the German surrender, he will agree that, as a result of our sufferings and sacrifices in a common cause, the Soviet Union then had in the United States a deposit of good will as great if not greater than that of any other country. It is little short of a tragedy that Russia should have withdrawn that deposit with the recklessness and the lack of appreciation shown during the last 2½ years. Our assumption that we could cooperate and our patience in trying to cooperate justify the firmness we now must show.

The arguments at Potsdam were sometimes bitter and Stalin made it clear that he "disliked the tactics of Mr. Byrnes," although at the end of the conference he praised "Mr. Byrnes, who has worked harder perhaps than any of us." The Yalta Declaration on Liberated Europe, on which the Allied leaders had agreed in February, 1945, was proving difficult to translate into agreed policy in July. In the next installment of "Speaking Frankly," which will be published tomorrow, Mr. Byrnes outlines the discussions at Potsdam of eastern Europe and its future.

Water Fowl Smuggling By Air Investigated

By The Associated Press

W. E. Crouch, who will retire next week as chief Federal game warden, said yesterday the Fish and Wildlife Service is investigating an increase in the aerial smuggling of water fowl across international borders.

"The racket has been for lawbreakers to take off from the Canadian prairie Provinces or from Mexico, land in the United States, drop off their birds and then fly back," Crouch told a reporter.

Ramadier Hits Communists And De Gaulle

By William J. Humphreys

Paris, Oct. 23.—Premier Paul Ramadier denounced French communism and Gen. Charles de Gaulle as "extremist" elements today and as inherent dangers to the republic.

Ramadier

After he had worked past midnight consolidating his weakened cabinet, the weary Premier told reporters at noon that he was not giving in. Instead, he was going to ask for a vote of confidence to keep France on an even political keel. He warned of the alternatives: De Gaulle or the Communists.

It seemed the Premier was speaking for a caretaker government whose length of life depends on the De Gaullist Rally of the French People, which captured about 40 per cent of the popular vote in last Sunday's municipal elections.

A short life seemed almost certain when the parliamentary group of the Socialist and Democratic Union of the Resistance (UDSR) balloted 21 to 1 abstention against voting confidence in the Ramadier regime.

The UDSR has been affiliated with the government since May, and has one member of the cabinet.

In addition, Radical-Socialists gave signs of wavering. This moderate party has two ministers in Ramadier's administration, regrouped to meet Communist labor union demands for a 50 per cent increase in wages and pressure from the De Gaullist front.

Radical-Socialists decided to withhold action until after the Premier appears before the National Assembly, after it meets October 28. But their communique added that the party confirmed "its complete solidarity with the UDSR."

These developments only

These developments only strengthened the belief that De Gaulle controls the future of the government. The most prominent factors in the situation are the following:

1. The De Gaullist RPF, being only 6 months old, is not represented officially in the National Assembly, but, as a result of the municipal elections, it now controls most of its Popular Republican (MRP) members in view of MRP followers' desertion to De Gaulle's candidates.

2. The MRP, with 170 seats, is the largest party that was sustaining the Ramadier administration.

Ramadier must have MRP backing, or lack a majority. Therefore, the continuation of his cabinet appears to rest on De Gaulle's sympathies.

RPF spokesmen have said that he will not make them known until the run-off elections next Sunday in small towns where an absolute majority was necessary for election on the first round.

Without MRP support, Ramadier's only apparent port in the political storm would be union with the Communists who control 171 seats. But this possibility appeared to have been written off by the premier's denunciation today.

1949 Reported British Date to Leave Palestine

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—An authoritative source said today that Britain was planning to withdraw her troops and administration from Palestine by March, 1949, "at the very latest," unless a United Nations decision agreeable to both Jew and Arab is forthcoming.

Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, British High Commissioner in the Holy Land, another informant said, was on a village-by-village tour to make this determination clear to both Arab and Jew, in the hope they would get together, and avoid confusion when Britain withdraws.

The source said the British plans would not "prejudice" the pledge given the U. N. that Britain would be ready to play a part in implementing any plan acceptable to both Jews and Arabs.

Jerusalem, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Jewish Agency said today that the 18,000 interned Jews on Cyprus had offered to allot 700 immigration certificates to their comrades of the "Exodus 47," now in a British camp in north Germany.

The Jews on Cyprus, like those of the Exodus, were intercepted when trying to reach Palestine without immigration certificates.

Opening of War Dead Caskets Up to States

The Army said yesterday that whether the caskets of war dead being returned home from overseas for burial may be opened for inspection by relatives depends on laws in the various States.

Officials told a reporter that some States have laws forbidding exhumation within specified periods. The caskets will not be opened while bodies are in Army custody, but jurisdiction passes from the Army with delivery of the body to the next of kin.

Attlee's Daughter to Wed

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—Miss Janet Attlee, demure, 24-year-old daughter of Prime Minister and Mrs. Clement Attlee, will be married November 15 to Harold Shipton, an electronics engineer, in rites almost overlooked in the excitement over Princess Elizabeth's wedding five days later.

CIO Electrical Union Refuses Red Affidavits

By the United Press

The United Electrical Workers (CIO) told the National Labor Relations Board yesterday that it does not intend to sign the non-Communist affidavits required by the Taft-Hartley Law, and will challenge their constitutionality in the courts.

Seymour Linfield, associate general counsel of the union, also told a board hearing that the union's refusal to comply should have no bearing on a pending case which arose before the law became effective.

The UEW, which several congressional committees have charged is under Communist influence, is one of several big CIO unions which have not complied with the non-Communist provision.

The pending case involves six union members who were discharged by General Electric X-Ray Corp., Chicago, on the demand of the International Association of Machinists (Ind.) after the union said the men failed to maintain their membership dues.

All six joined the UEW and contended they resigned from the Machinists Union during an escape period provided in the contract with the company.

Argentina to Receive Tin From Bolivia Under Treaty

Sanandita, Bolivia, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Argentine President Juan D. Peron and Bolivian President Enrique Hertzog met here today and exchanged ratifications of trade and financial agreements granting Bolivia credit and loans from Argentina aggregating $162,500,000.

Peron

Hailed as opening a new era of economic development for Bolivia, the treaty calls for the sale to Argentina of 800 tons of Bolivian tin a year for five years, at a basic price of 76 cents (United States) a pound, F. O. B. Pacific ports.

Argentina gets option on an additional 1200 tons a year, to be bought freely in the open market, without official intervention. For many years past, Bolivia has sold its entire tin production to the United States.

Bolivia gets a 150 million dollars credit for public works and a $12,500,000 loan for sanitation of several cities.

Two Strikers Fined, Union Official Freed

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—Michael Tyson, international representative of the United Furniture Workers (CIO), was acquitted of disorderly conduct charges today, but two striking members of Local 472 paid a total of $75 in fines for assault.

The local called a work stoppage at the Colonial Hardwood Flooring Co., Oct. 3, but did not establish a picket line until last week. Approximately 90 workers are involved.

Charges against Carol Robinson and Harold J. Sisk, both 24, were brought by three nonstriking employes. Oscar Jones told Magistrate Harry E. Snyder he lost a toot hwhen Sisk tried to prevent him from entering the plant.

Britain Reduces Daily Diet, Bans Imports of U. S. Tobacco

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—New cuts in Britain's daily diet, a reduction in naval manpower to 147,000 and a ban on tobacco imports from the United States were announced today by the government in a new program to combat the economic crisis.

The program was outlined to a silent Commons by Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Economic Affairs, and Defense Minister A. V. Alexander. It also calls for curbs on home and factory building and the sale of more than half of the sterling area's estimated $2,400,000,000 gold reserves during the next 14 months.

Emphasizing what was at stake, Cripps declared:

"If our economy and that of Europe should collapse, our democracy in all probability will collapse too and will disappear, and with it will go the last stronghold of western democratic civilization in Europe."

He announced that all tobacco imports from the United States already had been stopped; that new food import reductions would cut the average daily diet from 2870 calories to below 2700 and that public and private expenditures for building homes and factories and buying machinery must be slashed by 800 million dollars a year.

Cripps, declaring that Britain's greatest financial problem was in obtaining dollars for the purchase of essential food and raw materials, warned that even stringent economies would not avert further heavy sales of gold reserves. In recent weeks, Britain has sold 200 million dollars of her estimated $2,400,000,000 gold reserve to the United States to cover "general commitments" in the United States.

The economics minister estimated that by the end of 1948 the entire sterling area's gold reserves would drop to $1,080,000,000.

More Austerity to Come

Cripps warned of still sharper austerity to come.

He was challenged immediately by Viscount Hinchingbrooke, who urged big investments from exporting countries, he said the Labor government was "afraid of the tags" which might be put on loans and would not accept them "because the government was frightened of the effect of nationalization on opinion in the United States and Canada."

Cripps declared that by cutting down imports and stepping up export production, Britain was expected to reach "an approximate balance" of her total export-import trade by the end of 1948. This would be six months later than the original target date.

He warned, however, that the "dollar deficit" would continue for years because Britain exports only about 21 per cent of her export production to dollar countries while importing much more from the same areas.

He estimated that the country will save 20 million dollars this season by its ban on further imports of tobacco from the United States. He added the import ban would not mean an immediate reduction in supplies to the public because of stocks on hand, estimated at nearly two years' supply.

Cripps said Britain could not maintain the existing level of food imports without exhausting the gold reserves in 1948.

The food import reduction, he said, would make possible a saving of about 264 million dollars a year. The cuts will mean, he continued, a sugar ration of eight ounces per person per week, compared with the present 10 ounces. The bacon ration will remain at one ounce weekly. The meat ration was cut from 24 cents' worth a week to 20 cents in September.

Cripps said the Marshall Plan aid "would be of the greatest help to us over the next few years, but we are bound to proceed on the basis that we must help ourselves to the utmost."

He said negotiations for mutual lowering of the United States tariff barriers and imperial preference are "within sight of successful conclusion." He added Britain thus would benefit by increasing her exports to the United States.

(In Richmond, Va., prices of upper grades of tobacco declined on Virginia markets today, and tobacco industry spokesmen attributed the price decline to the British action.)

Universal Training Backers Organize

Committee Members Probably Will Seek Passage of Bill During Special Session

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Backers of universal military training urged last night that Congress consider legislation for a year's training of young American men at the special session called by President Truman.

Warren

Representatives of more than 50 national organizations met here yesterday to organize a National Security Committee to back universal training and heard Governor Earl Warren of California strongly indorse the movement.

Warren flew here to address the group and immediately returned to California by air. In backing universal training, the Californian took a position similar to another Republican governor also prominently mentioned as a GOP Presidential candidate—Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Roberts Heads Committee

Still another Republican hopeful, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, who is expected to announce his candidacy today, has declared himself opposed to such compulsory training.

Owen J. Roberts, retired U. S. Supreme Court Justice, invited members of the national veterans, fraternal, church, educational and business organizations to yesterday's meeting. He was elected national chairman of the committee at its organization meeting at the Willard Hotel.

The National Security Committee decided to press for passage of compulsory training legislation as their major present effort, but not to neglect other defense measures. Several of the delegates wanted to confine the outfit solely to the training legislation.

Main activity of the group, it was voted, should be to organize local chapters made up of representatives of the parent order to arouse public support for a strong national defense.

See Truman Today

"We want an alert citizens committee constantly pointing a finger at those charged with our national defense," Roberts declared.

Announcement of the White House plans for a special session of Congress to consider foreign aid and high prices came after the committee had adjourned for the day. But individual members agreed that Congress could and should find time during the special meeting to study the training proposal, too.

The group will see President Truman today and is expected to ask him to call for early action on the training plan.

Insurance, Says Warren

Governor Warren told the committee that the lack of universal military training forced the last two wars upon the United States.

"It was our apparent weakness and not our strength that caused Germany and Japan to assault us," he said. "No sane ruler or country would deliberately provoke war with a rich country like ours if it were known that we were ready to defend ourselves. Any bully might try it, otherwise."

The California Governor attacked the contention that the atomic bomb made manpower unimportant in national defense. Another war, he declared, will be total war, and if it comes "we will be prepared beforehand or never."

Among the organizations taking part in the organization of the National Security Committee were: Kiwanis International, Polish Legion of American Veterans, the United States Conference of Mayors, American Legion, VFW, Elks, Moose, United States Chamber of Commerce, Sons of the American Revolution, Jewish War Veterans, Amateur Athletic Union, Rotary International, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and American Council of Christian Churches.

Britain Cuts Home Fleet To 5 Warships

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—The government announced additional drastic cuts in British naval manpower today and said the reductions would entail "temporary immobilization of a considerable part of the Home Fleet."

Defense Minister A. V. Alexander, who announced the reductions in Commons, said the cut "during this temporary period" would leave one cruiser, the Superb, and four battle destroyers in the Home Fleet.

Under this program, Britain would have the smallest Home Fleet in her history.

The accelerated demobilization—part of a program to pare national expenditure and help fill the manpower gap at home—will cut manpower to 147,000 by March 31, Alexander said.

Naval estimates for 1947-48, announced last March, called for a force of 191,000 men.

The defense minister gave assurance the fleet in the Mediterranean would not be reduced. He did not disclose its size.

The strength of the Home Fleet at the time the further cuts were ordered was one battleship, five cruisers and 12 destroyers, apart from a large training battle squadron and destroyers, frigates and other ships reported to number nearly 200.

"In some instances," he declared, "this period of immobility will be very short. If during its continuance there should be any emergency, it would be possible to bring back to full commission a considerable number of the ships concerned at relatively short notice.

"In addition, at all times there will be two modern battleships and at least two modern aircraft carriers, with ancillary craft, maintained in commission and engaged on sea training duties in home waters."

Heads Navy Alumni

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—Capt. Robert B. Pirie, head of the Naval Academy aviation department, has been elected president of the Annapolis Chapter of the Academy Alumni Association.

U. S. Rejects Russian Plan For Censoring 'Warmongers'

By Robert Bruskin

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 23.—The United States today vehemently rejected Soviet demands for censorship of "warmongers" as an attempt to "put shackles on the brain of man as well as a gag in his mouth."

Warren R. Austin denounced the Russian proposal for United Nations condemnation of American, Greek and Turkish "warmongers" as a "direct attack on the United States" by the Soviet Union.

Efforts to suppress and criminally punish those who are considered by the Russians as spreading war propaganda can lead only to establishment of a police state, he told the Assembly's Political Committee.

Obviously Angered

Andrei Vishinsky's attack yesterday on Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and his book, "Speaking Frankly" was a "grossly distorted idea of his beliefs," said Austin.

He assured the Russians that the results of their attack on Byrnes would be an increased sale of his book, "which will greatly enrich" the charitable organization to which the proceeds have been donated.

Vishinsky was not present to hear Austin or the concerted condemnation of his resolution from the Philippines, El Salvador, Haiti and especially Canada. Austin dropped his customary cold legal manner to make the American reply. No one of his delegation could remember when Austin had ever been so obviously angered—or when any of his speeches had been so eloquent.

Canadian Resolution

Yet, despite the complete American rejection of any proposal which would infringe on freedom of speech, there was a growing number of delegates who sought support for some measure to bind the Soviets in some moral agreement to ban Russian propaganda which has been particularly intense recently.

J. L. Ilsley of Canada introduced one resolution today that brought favorable reaction from many of the delegation. It proposed simply that:

"The United Nations condemn all propaganda inciting to aggressive war or civil strife which might lead to war, and urge members to promote, by all means of publicity and propaganda available to them, friendly relations among nations on the basis of the purposes and principles of the Charter."

Many declared that Russia would object to any hampering of her propaganda to encourage "civil strife." They pointed to the declaration yesterday by Col. Gen. Andrei A. Zhdanov, member of the Soviet Politburo and secretary of the Communist Party central committee, calling for Communists and their sympathizers to join throughout the world in battle against American "imperialism" and the Marshall Plan.

Only Haiti supported an Australian resolution condemning all forms of propaganda in every country. The proposal requested members of the United Nations to take "positive steps to encourage the fair and accurate reporting of official and other statements" affecting internal relations.

Many delegates from countries which practice as well as preach freedom of speech feared that the Australian proposal meant forcing its newspapers to print everything their officials might say.

Austin declared that the Russians were "making a direct attack upon the very foundation of all that keeps our Government free and assures to its people the blessings of true liberty."

Public Opinion Spring

"Only if all sides of great issues can we hope to crystallize and organize public opinion into positive action here in the United Nations," he said.

Even Russia with its government control has been unable to suppress completely the Soviet people from "observing, comparing, thinking and whispering to each other their true thoughts," he declared.

If the resolution were approved, what would happen if people like Vishinsky were called to judge the worth of books like those of Byrnes? he asked. Under that type of "tyranny," he said, people would have "nothing but rebellion and revolution" as an escape.

"In your country do you want the type of man that Mr. Justice Byrnes represents and that John Foster Dulles (American delegate also called a 'warmonger') represents gagged? Or do you want them free to speak up and warn of danger when it appears to them?"

Ilsley, in support of his resolution, declared that the Soviet press has been conducting an especially vitriolic campaign against Canada as "lackeys of Wall Street." That, he said, "is warmongering though the authors of this resolution obviously did not have it in mind when they presented it to us."

The Russian definition of propaganda, he said, is "any expression of opinion hostile to their own foreign policies."

In totalitarian states, he said, "a warlike declaration or a bellicose pronouncement can be made only with the authority of the government which has total control of all the mechanism of propaganda and where there is no freedom of opinion."

Probably the best representation of how delegates from the smaller democratic states feel was made by Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, chairman of the Philippine delegation.

Shoe on Other Foot

Russia, he declared, is placed in a ridiculous position by its resolution. When the question of sending a Balkan commission to preserve world peace in Greece, Russia objected to it as an infringement of the sovereignty of its three satallites, Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

Having refused to take action on an "actual threat to peace," Russia now is asking "positive and vigorous action" against words—"against a war of words or with words," and condemns the United States, Turkey and Greece.

"With all his bitter denunciations of the press in the United States," said Romulo, "I wonder if it has ever struck Mr. Vishinsky as strange that in this country, periodicals like the Daily Worker and New Masses are being published. One would as soon expect the New York Daily News or the Chicago Tribune or even the New York Times to publish in Moscow."

19 Out of 25 Loan Firms Get Licenses

Licenses will be issued today to 19 small loan companies whose applications were approved yesterday by the Commissioners, License Supt. Edward E. Bailey, jr., announced last night.

Bailey, who submitted 25 applications to the Commissioners last week, said two had been withdrawn, two were incomplete, and two held up temporarily by protests.

Objections to the latter applications have since been withdrawn, Bailey said, and licenses will be issued as soon as the Commissioners approve them.

Among the firms to be licensed today are six companies reported by police to have members with criminal records, Bailey said. The only individual with a "serious" record has since withdrawn from the corporation in question, he revealed.

Licenses will be good only for the remainder of the current license year, which ends October 31, Bailey pointed out.

"I've sent each of them forms and instructed them to file renewal applications before November 1," he added.

Licenses will be issued to:

Auto Loan Service, Inc., 638 Pennsylvania ave se., and 1501 Maryland ave ne.; Mutual Credit Co., Inc., 901 10th st. nw.; James F. Overcharging Barber Shop Loses License

The District Commissioners announced yesterday they had revoked the barber shop license of Pat J. Fiordelise, proprietor of Esquire Shop at 1204 New York ave. nw.

The action was taken on recommendation of the Board for the Revocation of Licenses, which found Fiordelise "guilty of charging (an) . . . officer and enlisted men of the United States Army excessively and exorbitantly."

At a July 22 hearing, two Army sergeants—Gorrel Peters of Fort Meade, Md., and Alec Sohosky of Fort Bragg, N. C.—testified they had been presented with bills totaling $18.75 apiece last June after each had received a shave and massage.

"Compromise" charges of $10 each were paid after they complained, the sergeants said.

Lieut. Howard C. Nettles, United States Army, presently stationed at Vint Hill Farm Station, Warrenton, Va., told the board he was charged $5.25 last April for a shave and massage. No price list was posted in the barber shop, he said.

Edwin H. Letts, agent for the War Department's Criminial Investigation Section, testified there were a great many other complaining witnesses who couldn't testify because theyid been transferred to other sections of the country.

Members of the board are Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise, Chatham T. Nottingham, assistant superintendent of licenses; E. J. Millingan, executive secretary of the Public Utilities Commission, and Inspector Lloyd E. Kelly of the Metropolitan Police Department.

New Agency Established Here To Help Migrant Workers

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

A new agency to help migrant farm labor was set up here yesterday, after an all-day wrangle over left-wing moves—as leaders called them—to muscle in on the program.

The new group—the National Citizens Council on Migrant Labor—hopes to win basic rights and welfare conditions for the country's 2½ million migrant farm workers.

Experts told the meting that many of these people are practically slaves, hauled about the country in trucks, hired out in gangs to farms at harvest time, paid little or no cash, housed in box cars, warehouses, stables, hovels and filthy camps, with no medical services for their families, no schooling for their children and no hope for the future.

Seek Many Benefits

The council hopes to get the migrants the protection of wage laws, public control of labor camps and contractors, safe transport, social security benefits, decent housing and health and school services.

The recent law requiring sale of the 52 permanent and 70 temporary Federal farm labor camps brought a housing crisis for many of the migrants. The council will lobby for sale or lease of these camps to public agencies and nonprofit associations of farmers and fight their sale to private interests in whose hands they might be used to exploit the migrant workers. Army barracks and the like will be sought for the migrants.

This program was adopted and officers to carry it out chosen at a two-day conference at the National Educational Association, 16th and M sts. nw. Officials of many organizations and agencies in the welfare field were invited but leaders in the council said they came as individuals and not as representatives of their organizations.

Labor Officials Present

AFL and CIO officials were at the conference, but officials of the CIO Food, Tobacco and Agriculture Workers Union were invited.

"It does not seem logical to leave out the FTA," the Rev. Thomas B. Keehn, the council chairman, said, "but this particular union was so widely considered a left wing union that we did not wish a member of the FTA official group connected with the new outfit."

A large bloc of the sponsors was ready to walk out of the meeting—and the council—if this policy was upset.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sasuly, the Washington legislative agent of the FTA, was nominated from the floor for the board of directors of the council, but was beaten by a vote of 17 to 11.

Cooperation Welcomed

However, Donald Henderson, the FTA president, told The Washington Post later that his union, "the oldest union of farm workers, welcomed the cooperation of the new council in trying to improve the lot of farm laborers."

Elected to the board of directors, after nomination from the floor, were Mrs. Gay Shepperson of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, Alexandria, Va.; John K. Findly of the Unitarian Service Committee, and Cary McWilliams, author of Factories in the Field.

The other officers, elected upon nomination by a committee of the sponsors, are:

Honorary chairman, Dr. Paul Taylor, economics professor, University of California.
Chairman, the Rev. Keehn of the legislative division here of the Congressional-Christian churches.
Vice chairman, Elizabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer, National Women's Trade Union.
Secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Weston, 4343 Hawthorne st. nw.
Treasurer, Phillip Schiff, National Association of Jewish Center Workers.
Directors, the Rt. Rev. John F. Roland, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dr. Francis J. Brown, American Council of Education; Frank Bruce, National Catholic Rural Life Conference; Nelson Crockshank, AFL staff economist; Molly Flynn, 2512 Q st. nw.; the Rev. Shubert Frye, chairman, New York State Citizens Committee on Seasonal Farm Labor.
Also the Rev. William J. Gibbons, S. J., The American Press, New York; Mrs. Sarah K. Hepburn, Michigan Migrant Committee; Will Lissner, editor, American Journal of Economics and Sociology, New York; Miss Edith E. Lowry, executive secretary, Home Missions Council of North America; Elisabeth Magee, National Consumers League; Edith Marshburne, Midwest migrant supervisor of the Home Missions Council; Clarence Mitchell, director, National Association for Advancement of Colored People; Msgr. John O'Grady, National Conference of Catholic Charities.
Also Russell Smith, National Farmers Union; Mrs. M. E. Tilly, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Amber Warburton, secretary, Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth; George L. P. Weaver, director, National CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination; Mrs. Robert Wyckoff, jr., Watsonville, Calif., and Howard Whitman, writer of articles on the migrant problem.

Police Probe Figure Fears Arlington Wire-Tapping jumped bond 16 months ago, has not since been located, and the called.

$1000 bail bond has never been

2. A second gambling defendant who pleaded guilty twice within 14 months was given the same court sentence in each instance, $100 fine and six months' suspended sentence.

The bail-jumper was identified in the records presented to the grand jury as Louis Klein, formerly of 1930 Adams st., Arlington, who pleaded guilty to operation of a lottery on May 23, 1946, but disappeared before sentencing.

Asked yesterday why the bond was never called, Commonwealth Attorney Lawrence Douglas declared that collection of the bond would reduce the "incentive" of the bondsman to return the defendant to the police.

Records of the second case presented concerned Clarence L. Farling, of 6015 N. 21st st., Arlington, who was first sentenced on May 23, 1946, after pleading guilty to operation of an illegal (numbers') lottery. He was fined $100 and a six-month sentence suspended.

Less than a year later, the records showed, his gasoline station was raided and he was charged with operation of an illegal (numbers') lottery. On July 24, he pleaded guilty and was given the same sentence.

Newsstand Operator Testifies

Bankhead Davies, assistant Commonwealth Attorney, told reporters yesterday that Farling's second sentence was "sufficient considering the evidence we had against him."

William R. Smith, Arlington newsstand operator whose private complaint led to a raid last Thursday on the home of Russell (Peanuts) Scheele was the first witness called yesterday.

He told reporters after his appearance that he had "the word of one of the gamblers themselves" that they "paid plenty" to a high police official in Arlington County for "protection."

Smith, a former county policeman himself, is one of four persons who have reported receiving threats to "keep quiet" about gambling and any possible tie-up with county police.

Other Witnesses

Other witnesses who were called before the jurors yesterday included F. Freeland Chew, member of the Arlington County Board; Manuel Lazo, 49, of 1602 Danville st., Arlington, real estate operator; Mrs. Ethel Zirkle of 1124 N. Randolph st., Arlington, housewife.

Also, Crandal Mackey, attorney and former Commonwealth Attorney, who in 1904 led a party of citizen-raiders on gambling establishments operating openly along the Potomac River sector of the county; Oren R. Lewis, Arlington attorney and Republican candidate for Commonwealth Attorney, and John Sanders, Arlington County detective.

Scheele, 47, is scheduled to appear in Arlington County Court today to face charges of operating an illegal lottery.

Yeh Man, What A Ham! Is Judge's Trial Clincher

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Albemarle Circuit Court Judge Lem Smith tasted the evidence and then ruled for the defendant.

Confronted with conflicting testimony in a $116 lawsuit yesterday—the seller of a dressed hog contended it was good meat and fit for human consumption while the buyer charged the hog was a boar and demanded a refund—the judge ordered that a ham of the animal be brought into court. Then his honor, accompanied by claimants, attorneys and witnesses—14 in all—went across the Court Square to a hotel where the ham wast fried.

Participants in the ensuing feast said it "surely was a good ham." Judge Smith agreed and announced his decision:

"The ham has spoken for itself."

Va. Commission Denies Plea for Rail Rate Boost

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today dismissed without prejudice a petition of rail carriers operating intrastate in Virginia for a 10 per cent temporary increase on freight charges.

Shortly after the hearing opened on the carriers' petition this morning, the SCC members recessed briefly and returned to announce that the commission does not have authority to grant such temporary increases.

Sometime ago the railroads petitioned the ICC for freight charge increases of 28 per cent in interstate in the South and 38 per cent in "official" (Northern) territory.

Game Warden Acquitted In Shooting of Another

Snow Hill, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—A Worcester County Circuit Court jury today acquitted State Game Warden Philip D. Lines on charges of shooting Chester Hudson, 35, of Bishopville in the leg.

The warden said he fired at Hudson when he refused to obey an order to halt. Lines said he suspected Hudson of killing ducks out of season.

Morgenthau Hits State Dept Jewish Record

Henry Morgenthau, jr., says that for "18 terrible months" during which Nazis murdered Jews the State Department dealt with human lives in "the same lofty manner" it would handle a "not very urgent trade negotiation."

Hull

Writing of the wartime refugee problem in Collier's magazine, the former Secretary of the Treasury said the State Department "did practically nothing" for nearly a year and a half after learning the Nazis planned to "exterminate" all European Jews.

Morgenthau lifts the direct blame from Cordell Hull and Sumner Welles, then Secretary and Undersecretary of State, and puts it on underlings.

"Officials dodged their grim responsibility," he said, "procrastinated when concrete rescue schemes were placed before them, and even suppressed information about atrocities in order to prevent an outraged public opinion from forcing their hand."

The Treasury, he said, had to pass on financial phases of refugee relief plans, and:

"This gave us a front row view of those 18 terrible months of inefficiency, buck passing, bureaucratic delay and sometimes, what appeared to be calculated obstructionism."

Finally, after he went directly to President Roosevelt, Morgenthau said, the refugee question was taken from the State Department and given to a war refugee board named by the Chief Executive.

The board, he said, did a magnificent job. But because of the late start, Morgenthau said, "only one out of seven European Jews is alive today."

The former Treasury chief told of pushing a plan to send money to Switzerland to be used in getting 70,000 people out of France and Romania. He said the State Department delayed it, that it was referred to the British, and the Foreign Office was reluctant to approve even preliminary financial arrangements because of the difficulty of "disposing of any con-

Hull got off a reply rejecting the British position, Morgenthau said, and "I have rarely seen such strong language used in a communication with an ally."

At last, he said, orders went through to set up the refugee fund in Switzerland.

Va. Philanthropic Foundation Bars Lobbying in Grants

A philanthropic foundation founded by an Alexandria, Va., family will provide grants to charitable, religious or educational organizations—but only if they do not devote any "substantial part" of their activities to lobbying.

The foundation, organized by Robert South Barrett, retired businessman and philanthropist, of 404 Duke st., Alexandria, was granted a charter yesterday by the Virginia State Corporation Commission as a non-profit corporation.

Terms of Charter

Proceeds of the foundation are to be distributed for 30 years to non-profit groups as long as "no substantial part of their activities is the carrying on of propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

After 30 years, the corporation is to be dissolved by division of its assets equally between the National Florence Crittenden Mission and the Elks National Foundation, according to the charter.

The Crittenden Mission was founded by Barrett's mother, Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, and he now heads the charitable organization. A past grand exalted ruler of the Elks, he has also been active in the Masons.

Trustees Named

Named with him as trustees of the new foundation are his three sons and one daughter, Robert Tupper Barrett of Paris, France; Clifton Waller Barrett of New York; Capt. John Paul Barker Barrett, 525 Queen st., Alexandria, and Mrs. Viola Barrett Greenland, 113 S. Patrcik st., Alexandria.

The founder of the trust, who at one time was active in the Argentine sugar business, organized the Alexandria Improvement Association, through which he dealt in real estate, and formerly owned the Alexandria Gazette.

Russia Expected to Offer Wheat to Italy Before Election

Rome, Oct. 23 (AP).—Diplomatic observers said today they believed a carefully timed Russian offer of wheat is in the cards for Italy—whose stocks of bread grains seem sure to run out befor ethe national elections next spring.

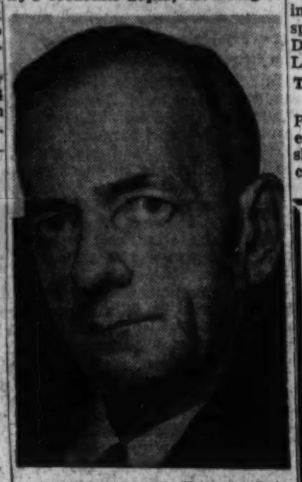
The informants added that if the U. S. S. R. makes the offer, the United States probably will be asked to furnish the ships to help transport it. Washington is expected to agree, they continued, even though the United States, from the publicity point of view, got the short end of the stick in its undertaking to help haul 400,000 tons of Soviet grai nto France in the spring of 1946.

The affirmative answer is expected because Italy's grain situation is grim. The Italian city dweller's diet now provides him with 1967 calories daily, compared with the pre-war average of 2637. Some American observers feel that a reduction of the bread ration might be more dangerous to American policy in Italy than any election propaganda Italian Communists could make of Russian wheat shipments.

Best available statistics indicate Italy needs 4,200,000 to 4,300,000 metric tons of wheat or wheat equivalents i nthe 1947-48 crop year to supply her 33,700,000 nonagricultural consumers the 235 grams (8.29 ounces) of bread daily and the one kilogram (2.204 pounds) of macaroni monthly which which the present ration provides.

Leader Condemns Dismantling German Plants

The Allied occupation program of dismantling German industrial plants is shattering to the country's economic hopes, according to



The Washington Post
KURT SCHUMACHER
Appeals for factories

Kurt Schumacher, head of the German Social Democratic Party.

The list of factories to be dismantled, Schumacher pointed out, includes the majority of Germany's most modern and productive establishments. These are factories for the production of peacetime items, not military materiel, he insisted.

Schumacher, a victim of 10 years in a Nazi concentration camp, spoke to reporters after a visit with David A. Morse, Undersecretary of Labor.

Threat to Marshall Plan

He declared that the Marshall Plan could scarcely be realized even if German production, now slumbering, were awakened. It cannot succeed, he intimated, if German industry is further reduced by the dismantling of more plants.

What difference did it make, Schumacher was asked, whether the plants were scrapped, inasmuch as Germany did not seem to be able to reach even a much lower level of output authorized under an earlier plan.

Schumacher answered that Germany had prospects of getting more manpower through the return of prisoners of war and looked for improved opportunities for production through greater food and coal output. After this improvement, the plants scheduled for dismantling could be put into production.

Doubts Dismantling

"I can't believe that the dismantling will be carried out," he said. "I beg you to observe not merely the economic results of such action, but also the political and psychological aspects."

He asked that European and German trade unions be accorded freedom of economic self-determination, in making their own decisions on such issues as the nationalization of basic industries.

Civil Antitrust Suit Filed Against Five Corporations

Attorney General Clark yesterday announced the filing of a civil antitrust suit against five corporations charging "conspiracy to monopolize and restrain trade" in the cast iron pressure pipe industry.

The attorney general said these companies are accused of "abuse of patent rights and lease-license agreements:"

United States Pipe & Foundry Co., Burlington, N. J.; James B. Clow & Sons, Chicago, Ill.; Glamorgan Pipe & Foundry Co., Lynchburg, Va.; Lynchburg Foundry Co., Lynchburg, Va.; McWane Cast Iron Co., Birmingham, Ala.

The Justice Department said the complaint charges unlawful use of lease-license agreements relating to patents.

"The elimination of the restraints in this field should aid in the competitive development of the industry and should have a beneficial effect on the development of housing projects," Clark said.

Struck Plant Siege by UAW In Ohio Lifted

Galion, Ohio, Oct. 23 (AP).—A tense truce was maintained in the North Electric Co. strike today despite an influx of union sympathizers from other Ohio cities.

The out-of-towners, who came here to reinforce CIO auto workers conducting a 12-hour siege of the telephone equipment factory last night, were sent back home by the UAW.

The plant, where a strike has been in progress since August 20, was closed until Monday, when company and union officials will meet, and the union said its temporary objective had been achieved.

Edward Duck, international representative of the UAW-CIO, had said the plant should remain closed until the company acts on the union demands for recognition and a 20 per cent wage increase.

The truce came suddenly after a night of sporadic rock throwing, window breaking and erroneous reports that the strikers and their sympathizers were planning to storm their way into the plant.

Some 350 nonstrikers, who normally would have gone home at 4:30 p. m., stayed in the plant while the crowd milled outside. They were assured safe conduct shortly before 1 a. m., when the company agreed to meet with the union.

The company's plant at Mount Gilead also is strike-bound. Its other factory—at Kenton—is not involved in the dispute, but it was damaged "extensively" early yesterday by a band of masked marauders who overpowered the night watchman and swung iron bars at machinery.

Hartley Plans Fight To Safeguard Worker

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23 (AP).—Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act, said today he would seek legislation next January "to make it a Federal offense to interfere with the rights of a worker who wants to go to a job free from harm to himself or his family."

Hartley received a noisy welcome when he appeared before 2000 industry executives attending a meeting of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

Asserting the Taft-Hartley Law placed management and labor at equal level at the bargaining table for the first time since the Wagner Act, Hartley told the industrialists they would be lax in their duties if they failed to exercise "the right of free speech" to "let your employes know the truth about the Taft-Hartley Law."

Dr. Tatum to Speak

Members of the Washington section of the Institute of Navigation will hear Dr. G. R. Tatum, of the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics laboratory, at 7:30 p. m., Tuesday, at the Army-Navy Club. Dr. Tatum's topic will be the "Problems of Guided Missile Development."

1939 War Production Plans Blocked, Louis Johnson Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Two New Deal Cabinet members blocked adoption of his 1939 plan for industrial mobilization before World War II, former Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson said yesterday.

Johnson

He told the Senate War Investigating Committee President Roosevelt knew as early as 1938 that war with Germany was inevitable, but adequate preparation was forestalled by "pacifism" and "brass hat" opposition.

Johnson said former Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and former War Secretary Harry Woodring killed the preparedness plan he had drawn up. They were aided, he declared, by Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, former head of Army Service Forces, now retired.

Assails Somervell

Woodring, said Johnson, was "a sincere pacifist" and Miss Perkins "violently opposed the plan" because he proposed that CCC camps be used for military training.

"I think this caused her to oppose releasing to the public the industrial mobilization plan," he testified, and added:

"The program was ditched by the brass hats without the President's knowledge because it did not suit the program of General Somervell. I feel definitely that the mistakes of General Somervell cost us a lot of money that would have been saved if the program had not been retarded."

The mobilization plan, he added, "got involved in what the press said at the time was Somervell's effort to get rid of Gen. George C. Marshall as Chief of Staff."

Warns of "50 Hiroshimas"

He warned that an adequate and workable "M-Day" plan was even more necessary now than before World War II.

"If we have another war," he declared, "we're not going to have a Pearl Harbor. We're going to have 50 Hiroshimas in the United States."

Johnson urged preparation now of an industrial mobilization plan and changes in the Armed Services Unification Act so that all procurement functions would be under a single head.

This suggestion was opposed by Donald M. Nelson, wartime head of the War Production Board, who testified the job of procurement was "too big" for one man. Nelson said experience of the WPB dictated placing the power to issue priorities under a single head and dividing other procurement functions.

He disagreed also on preparation of an over-all plan to be applied immediately in case of emergency.

"The Army and Navy," he pointed out, "had an M-Day plan they had worked on for 20 years, but when war came only the artillery could work on it. What the artillery needed was provided for, but everything else had changed."

Supported by Wilson

He reiterated that the vital move would be to set up one agency to synchronize priorities. He said, answering Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) that labor and materials should be allocated by the same authority.

Nelson agreed with Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) that by creation of WPB 45 days after Pearl Harbor, the Johnson plan was actually put into effect.

Johnson's arguments found support in Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., and vice chairman of WPB under Nelson.

Wilson said special importance should be assigned to scientific development and engineering. At present, he declared, "we are just pioneering in new weapons."

"I believe," he added, "that we can make the United States so strong only a madman would attack us."

Johnson said President Roosevelt's information on Germany's war preparations came from diplomatic attaches and from American businessmen with interests abroad who "understood what they saw and reported everything unfriendly to this country."

Messerschmitt Uncovered

He told reporters after his testimony that these businessmen were much better intelligence agents than the attaches. As one example, he told of an aircraft manufacturer who went to Berlin to find what he could about an airplane which was known to be under cover in a Berlin underground factory.

This man, Johnson said, visited the factory and despite armed guards ripped off the canvas covering the airplane. It was the secret Messerschmitt 109, and his description of what he saw led to immediate design and production of the Douglas A-20, a highly successful light attack bomber.

In numerous exchanges with Chairman Brewster (R., Me.), Pepper sought to show that the Johnson plan had been put almost wholly into effect before the war ended. Brewster contended, with Johnson's support, that much waste and expense would have been saved by application of the plan as early as 1940.

Nelson disagreed. He said material procurement was more satisfactory by being "taken by degrees" and "meeting situations as they arose."

ITU Laws May Be in Conflict With Act, President Admits

Baltimore, Oct. 23 (AP).—President Woodruff Randolph of the International Typographical Union said today "it is quite possible" some of its general laws "are in conflict with" the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Randolph made the statement as he appeared on the stand for the third day at a National Labor Relations Board hearing on complaints the ITU and its Baltimore Local 12 refused to bargain in good faith with 22 printing firms in the Baltimore Graphic Arts League.

It is the first case against a union since such proceedings were legalized under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The international president was under questioning by Earle K. Shawe, former NLRB attorney, who is counsel for the Graphic Arts League.

"Does the ITU recognize that any of its general laws are in conflict with the Taft-Hartley law?" Shawe asked.

"It is quite possible that some of the general laws are," Randolph replied.

Henry Kaiser, ITU attorney, objected to the question.

"Any organization can make rules governing its own membership without a brush with the Taft-Hartley law," he declared. "It may be, however, that making such general law part of a contract between employers and employes might be illegal under the new statute."

Shawe countered with the ITU's general laws had been made part of contract proposals which the local advanced.

Kaiser replied that the draft of the proposed contract incorporated the ITU laws "subject to their legality under the Taft-Hartley law." He said it was "inane and ill-founded" for the league to contend the union had tried to draw the employers into an illegal contract.

In questioning Randolph, Shawe sought to bring out that International holds close control over any contract bargaining undertaken by a local.

Randolph said the ITU's executive board "advises its locals on policy and they are expected to follow that advice."

Attorneys and NLBR attaches indicated the lengthy hearings may be concluded Friday or Saturday.

Unions Must 'Seek' Raises, AFL Unit Says

The AFL publication, Labor's Monthly Survey, said yesterday that "unions must seek upward wage adjustments" due to high living costs.

The monthly said that whether a "new upward price spiral will be started by a third round of wage increases" depends on "the statesmanship of management and workers as they conduct negotiations."

The position set forth by the survey is the strongest taken in the AFL so far for a new wage increase campaign. The organization itself failed to make any specific statement on wages at its recent convention in San Francisco.

The publication said:

"The American Federation of Labor has repeatedly urged the policy of wage increases without raising prices as the only way any real progress can be made. That policy is more important than ever today as we face the dire consequences of a new inflationary spiral.

"Such a policy, however, can only succeed if management comes half way, submitting facts and figures acceptable to both parties to show the wage increase possible without raising prices, and sitting down in good faith with labor to work out ways and means of raising wages within present prices."

The AFL publication called on industry to explain disposition of what the survey said will be an "all-time peak" in profits in 1947.

16 Lost in Boat Crash

Rangoon, Burma, Oct. 23 (AP).—Sixteen persons, including several women and children, were reported lost today following a collision between a passenger launch and a freight packet in the Rangoon River. Fourteen of 30 passengers aboard the launch were rescued.

Democrats to Pick Convention City

By The Associated Press

Democratic National Committee officials indicated yesterday the choice of a site for the party's 1948 national convention now lies between Philadelphia and San Francisco. The convention city will be selected at a meeting of the committee here next Wednesday.

Philadelphia, selected by the Republicans for their convention, is the only city to submit a formal bid for the Democratic meeting. San Francisco, however, is said to be favored by Robert E. Hannegan, retiring next week as Democratic national chairman.

Counting Pennies with Carolyn

It's a "joy ride" to Shirlington by bus or private car on these beautiful Fall days. The Shirley Highway leads Virginia residents or District people straight to the heart of this modern and beautiful business center. Leave your car in ample parking space, and you're only a step from every store in the community. Buses run to the center on frequent schedules from neighboring Virginia communities, and leave the A. B. & W. terminal at 11th and Pennsylvania in Washington every twenty minutes. You'll enjoy the quick and pleasant trip.

Go this afternoon, or tomorrow, and stay to dine and enjoy the television show at the Shirlington Delicatessen, when you finish shopping. You're sure to relish the excellent food, prepared by chefs who understand the art of cookery, served in attractive surrounding. While you're savoring a delicious meal, you'll be eye-witnessing, via television, an exciting football game, or a fast hockey match. The Shirlington Delicatessen, which seats 100 guests, is the only restaurant featuring television in the neighborhood. Plan a visit soon at meal-time, or for refreshments any time during the evening until 10:30.

Most every man wants a good looking sports jacket, like those at the Woodrow Stores in Shirlington, this time of year. He can wear it for indoor and outdoor country life, to football and hockey games, informally anywhere. At Woodrow's he can take his pick from a brand new shipment of all-wool tiny herringbone tweeds and Glen plaid weaves in tan, brown or blue. Slacks to go with the new sports coat are at Woodrow Stores, too, in covert and tweed, from $4.98 up.

When it comes to clothes, it's "Ladies First." One of the most irresistible suits you can find, if you wear misses' sizes up to 20, is at Ann Lewis. At $39.99, it's really "dreamy," of cream-soft pure wool gabardine, tailored with a diagonal closing and double-tiered effect. Choose it in wine, green, grey, black, or a beautiful new shade of midnight blue. Just imagine! You can match it with a beautiful hooded gabardine coat at only $29.99. What a fashion couple they make!

Carroll Hosiery Shop has the gloves you want to complete every fall outfit. Polished kid and svelte suede for dress and town come in shades keyed to fall fashions as well as black and brown . . . cost $4.95 and $5.95 a pair. Fine quality suede-finished fabric gloves in black or brown are only $1.95—look expensive. Get your fall glove wardrobe at these very reasonable prices.

That wonderful store where you can get just about everything for your home—you guessed it, Shirlington Woolworth's—has a new group of lampshades in many sizes and patterns. Tiny pleated rayon boudoir shades in pastel colors hang on the head of your bed shielding the light to a soft glow. Twenty-inch standing lamp shades come in a new plastic, pleated to look like silk . . . but you can sponge away dust and grime in a jiffy. Paper parchment shades, as practical as they are handsome, both round and octagonal, are decorated with flower print designs. You'll be really intrigued with the special children's lamps. These have circus and nursery rhyme characters in porcelain for bases and shades to match. The little folk will be wild about them.

Leave your car at the Shirlington Motor Company's large and complete modern plant for complete brake adjustment. The job includes removing brake drums on all wheels, adjusting anchor cables on rods, adjusting pedal on hydraulic fluid controlled brakes, and road test. All the work can be done while you shop.

Extra Session

There will be widespread relief over the President's recall of Congress in special session on November 17 to handle the twin problem of aid to Europe and our domestic inflation. It will be an informed Congress. Over 200 of our legislators have been in Europe since July, and by November 17 they will all be back, ready to give their colleagues the benefit of their observations. The stay-at-homes will be able to reciprocate by bringing the travelers up-to-date about the growing discontent of the country over the rising cost of living. When the President sends his message to Capitol Hill, he will thus find a Legislature which will know the background of his recommendations.

It has been our contention that aid to Europe can be squared with an anti-inflation program. Foreign shipments undoubtedly help to put up prices at home, but the remedy is not to halt the shipments, for these are necessary for our national security. We need a policy, not a retreat. If Soviet Russia can afford shipments, surely we can. Assistance to western Europe and anti-inflation can both be accomplished by the adoption of some comprehensive and interrelated plan of action such as from time to time we have itemized. It is refreshing to have this acknowledgment from the White House that events can be controlled and that we have the power to control them. Till this sign appeared an ostrich attitude had prevailed—a sort of demonstration of helplessness, as if events were controlling and that all that could be done was to bow our heads while they accumulated in force and overwhelmed us. We hail the President's leadership.

No News Is Big News

We cannot help wondering about the curious unanimity with which the newspapers chose to give first place in yesterday's editions to the dispatches from Moscow containing the declaration by Comrade Zdhanov. It is true, of course, that Comrade Zdhanov is at the moment a very important fellow, a member of the Politburo, No. 3 man in the Moscow hierarchy, and mentioned by some as the probable successor to Stalin. It is thus a fair assumption that whenever Comrade Zdhanov chooses to say something, it is not without a certain significance.

But what did Comrade Zdhanov choose to say? Well, it appears that he exhorted all Communists throughout the world to rally in defense of Russian interests against the imperialistic expansionism of the United States as represented in the Marshall Plan. It was precisely as though members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union were being asked again to rally against the saloon evil or the nudist clubs were being called upon to oppose the new low hemlines on skirts. In other words, Comrade Zdhanov was urging the Communist Parties to do what they would do of their own accord, con amore.

Thus two interpretations of the Zdhanov declaration are possible: (a) that it was merely in the nature of a pep talk such as are given by coaches to high school football teams just before game time and by sales managers to their crews just before they are turned loose to sell brushes or insurance; or (b) that it was another exercise in Communist doubletalk, with one meaning for the initiate and another for the—er—laity. In the first case, it seems to us that Comrade Zdhanov's statements scarcely justified the prominence given to them; in the other it seems to us that the dispatch should have been accompanied by a glossary that would have made it intelligible to the ordinary reader.

Poultryless

There can be no blinking the fact that in many areas the voluntary food conservation program is not going well. The reason is simple: confusion. Individuals and eating establishments are not complying with it, not for any lack of heart, but because people simply are not convinced that meatless and poultryless days are actually contributing to food saving.

Particularly is confusion rampant with respect to poultryless Thursdays. There have been repeated intimations that this part of the campaign is about to be abandoned. A decision can no longer be deferred. It is difficult to explain why abstention from the consumption of poultry aids the shipment of grain abroad. Yet a case can be made for poultryless days, if only because favors to one segment of grain users would immediately bring demands for favors from others, such as distillers. Whatever is decided, the need for decision is immediate, lest the whole food-saving program be undermined.

To recognize the significance of voluntary saving is not to overestimate its importance. Voluntary methods are not enough. We hope that in calling the special session of Congress President Truman will make unmistakable the vital need for allocation powers in combating the crisis. Indeed, we hope he will go one step further. It is glaringly obvious that the food shortage is not something of a few months' duration. This year we undoubtedly shall have the smallest grain carryover in our history. If our crop is anything less than bumper next year—and already drouths have delayed planting—we may be faced with a situation even worse than now confronts us. Moreover, present predictions on next year's meat supply indicate that there will be even less than during the war when we had rationing!

Prudence requires that we have meat ration books printed and rationing machinery ready to put in operation if needed, but in high places prudence is the prerogative of the courageous.

The Worst Bottleneck

The Krug report on National Resources and Foreign Aid states that the shortage of steel and steel products is one of the principal bottlenecks in maintaining or increasing production. The shortage of steel, for example, has handicapped manufacturers of machinery, automobiles, and other vehicles, as well as the oil industry, which needs more pipe lines, steel tubing, etc. Coal output has been cut by shortages of open-top cars, and the shipping of wheat and other essentials has been hampered by freight car shortages traceable to inadequate steel supplies. Moreover, there is a "crippling shortage" of steel in foreign countries resulting in pressing demands for steel for export.

The remedy, however, is not held to lie in construction of new steel production facilities, as Walter Reuther and other critics of the industry have maintained. For the report points out that the steel bottleneck is due primarily to shortages of raw materials, especially steel scrap. This week the price of scrap soared to new record heights as a result of the tight supply situation, and it is feared that operating schedules of mills may have to be curtailed because of difficulty in obtaining supplies. At the present time, indeed, ingot production is below rated capacity owing to raw material shortages, and the Krug report asserts that the additional quantities of scrap required to raise output will be difficult to obtain. Hence prompt return of industrial scrap, accelerated scrapping of war surplus materials, and systematic collection of obsolescent scrap are urged as the chief means of supplementing inadequate supplies. Shortages of coking coal, the poor quality of some available coking coal, and high production costs are other reasons for inability to utilize existing steel-making capacity to the full.

Under the circumstances the construction of new facilities would, as the report says, be ineffective unless raw materials are available in adequate quantities to make those facilities fully productive. Moreover, such construction would require the use of steel that is critically needed currently both here and abroad. Consequently chief reliance is placed on increasing pig iron and ingot capacity by new technological means. As regards finishing capacity, the need for increases will, of course, depend upon the type of products in demand.

It may be necessary ultimately to expand our domestic steel capacity to take care of a long-range increase in domestic demands, even when the present extraordinary temporary demand has been satisfied. But that is a question for future determination. Certainly present conditions preclude any large amount of immediate expansion, while such new facilities as are currently being installed will not be in operation for two years. Relief of pressing shortages depends primarily, therefore, upon more effective utilization of the producing facilities at hand, as well as efforts to reduce foreign drains on our resources by aiding the efforts of other countries to increase the output of their own steel producing industries. To make the program of foreign aid yield maximum returns the report concludes that Government and industry must also cooperate in controlling exports and channeling domestic supplies in order to insure their availability for essential needs at home.

Plebe System

During the war and immediately afterward, the Army was the object of most of the criticism of needlessly authoritarian practices and the so-called caste system. This was so not because of any lily-pure policy in the other services, but because the Army contained the great bulk of the men. That the Navy, too, has its share of irritants is indicated pointedly in an article, "Why I Resigned From Annapolis," by Ralph Lee Smith in the current Atlantic. Mr. Smith's condemnation of the plebe system at the Naval Academy as frustrating the very discipline under which it is justified presents a challenge which we should like to see taken up by the Navy.

The usual rejoinder that criticism stems from soreheads hardly can apply to Mr. Smith's case. He resigned from Annapolis on his own volition after 19 months—long after he had weathered the tribulations of his plebe year. Moreover, his remarks, he reports, have had the approval of many of his classmates. Furthermore, his barbs are not directed solely at the plebe system—the method under which upperclassmen allegedly indoctrinate and maintain discipline among newcomers through hazing and humilitation. What Mr. Smith has to say about the restrictions which limit use of the Naval Academy library to a mere handful of students will make interesting reading not only for the Navy brass but also for the taxpayers who pay the bills. Also his remarks about the "compartmentalized" teaching and assignment system do no good to the academy's standing as a scholastic institution.

The vicious thing about the plebe system, as Mr. Smith emphasizes, is that it condones hazing not as mere horseplay, but with "the noblest pretensions, and under the loftiest banners." Sadism is of course confined to a few instances; but in this case the bad apples spoil the barrel, and the disturbing thing is that plebing is justified as teaching respect. What is more, actual physically injurious practices seem to have the tacit assent of those in command, despite academy regulations against hazing.

Undoubtedly many a crusty captain will arise to a spirited defense of the plebe system. Perhaps some sort of strictly disciplinarian system is necessary to test the mettle of newcomers. We seriously doubt, however, that many academy graduates, in honestly appraising the plebe system as now practiced, can think of any real justification of it other than that they themselves were subjected to it. We do not think it can be demonstrated, for example, that deliberate humiliation makes good officers. And while unquestionably there is a need for discipline, real discipline is the product of understanding and respect rather than brute force. In this connection the Naval Academy could take a leaf from the colleges, most of which have banned hazing as detrimental to morale and adjustment. If the Navy is to continue to attract its share of our best young men, it must expect to answer to an increasingly critical audience for some of its seemingly indefensible traditions, and more will be needed to justify them than merely the explanation that things have always been done that way.

Commie Tactics

If confirmation were needed of Walter Reuther's charge that his opposition in the United Automobile Workers is Communist-controlled, the opposition has now supplied it. A group styling itself the "Committee for UAW-CIO Progress and Unity" has emitted a press release—to which it refers as a "suggestion for editorial"—striving to make capital of the silly gossip naively publicized by Drew Pearson that Senator Taft wants Mr. Reuther as his 1948 running mate. Mr. Reuther found it necessary to denounce this fantastic idea, when Mr. Pearson first broadcast it, as a canard planted by his opponents. Their idea, apparently—so characteristically Communist as to be a dead giveaway—was to link Mr. Reuther's name with that of the principal author of the Taft-Hartley law, which is, of course, widely detested by organized labor.

We appreciate the "suggestion for editorial" of the press release. What it suggests to us is that Mr. Reuther is up against an opposition without honor or scruple or even good sense. Here is an excerpt from the handout: "It is a curious fact that while loud words of protest issued from the Reuther propaganda mills, not a single word of protest and not a single disclaimer came from the GOP—party of the Tafts, the Hartleys, the Hoovers, and—who knows—maybe the Reuthers." No one, of course, would expect a protest or disclaimer from the GOP, which is not in the business of protecting Mr. Reuther's reputation from slander.

The Progress and Unity boys of the CIO hit even farther below the belt. Mr. Reuther has been guilty of advocating that his union abide by the terms of a congressionally enacted statute. "We can't forget," they declaim in their press release, "that it was Reuther who, as head of the General Motors department, sabotaged the Cadillac Square demonstration against the Taft-Hartley Act. We can't forget that it is Reuther who stands for compliance with the new Taft-Hartley Employers Relations Board . . . These are things we can't forget. And because we can't forget them, we can't dismiss the Taft-Reuther story as too fantastic. It's all so logical."

Well, we hope the rank and file of the UAW can't forget that this is the kind of smear stuff the Commies have been pulling on every labor leader who has refused to follow their alien line. Mr. Reuther can thank his enemies for undressing themselves in public—and for proving his point about them so logically.

THE VALLEY PIKE

This white road's haunted, Shenandoah's tune
Grows wistful, darkness falls, there come to life
Slouch hats and slanted knives that fling the moon
Among the rustling oaks, a stubborn tread,
The Southland in their hearts they need no fife
To play them where the skies are ribbon-red;

And furious gashes deepen, as the Blue,
Their brothers, come in flood with valiant blade
Against them; from the same rich breast they drew
Their milk, and all the broad earth trembled when
They clashed. Though great red saltires droop and fade,
Proud Shenandoah mourns the Stonewall's men.

Nondiscrimination Bill

The next Congress will be faced with a dynamite-loaded bill which seeks to solve discriminatory hiring practices by decree. The sponsor of this bill, S. 984, is Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) who also sponsored a similar bill in New York State which, with the active support of Governor Dewey, became law. It is very similar to the New York anti-discrimination bill which prohibits discriminatory hiring practices (because of race, religion, color, national origin or ancestry) by private concerns over a certain minimum size.

Since Mr. Donald Richberg has so adequately covered the inanities and inadequacies of the bill, there is nothing much I can add. I should however, like to re-emphasize some of his points. First of all the bill is exceedingly dangerous in that it gives the Government commission which would be set up to decide whether or not an employer has turned down an application on grounds of race, religion, etc., an extraordinary and unparalleled control over business. Secondly Mr. Richberg feels, and I, too, that a businessman has a right to his opinions, whether or not you or I feel that they are not in the best Christian or American spirit, or whether or not we feel they are sound or unsound. Lastly it would cause endless litigation.

This bill must be defeated because, despite its probable ineffectiveness, it would put a dangerous precedent on the law books. But defeating this bill might be tougher than most realize. After all no Senator wants his constituents to think (and this is how it would appear) that he is opposed to hiring on qualification instead of on national origin. And undoubtedly the vile and violent opposition which certain senatorial pinheads will express against the bill will tend to drive many Senators into voting yes.

This does not mean that we should not act against discriminatory hiring practices. There are 12,865,518 Negroes in America and 11,419,138 foreign-born whites. Behind them are untold numbers of liberal people and the power of numerous organizations. Furthermore it is possible that church groups and labor unions would throw support to a boycott. The National Catholic Welfare Conference has done excellent work in fighting discrimination as has the CIO. So, would it not be possible for a group such as the NAACP to study and report on the most obvious cases of discriminatory hiring practices in Nation-wide corporations, enlist the support of a sizable portion of the above-named peoples and groups, and organize an effective boycott? "Film Flam"

By what right do you presume to pre-judge these Hollywood people in your "Film Flam editorial of October 21, before the investigation was even under way? Do you think a House investigating committee, after months of examining records, is doing all this, just for fun?

Do you think it is fair to decent practice to try to pre-prejudice the minds of the reading public against Congress, when you don't know what facts the investigation will bring out?

It is interesting to know that The Washington Post, judging from the first paragraph of your editorial seems to consider being a Communist as harmless as being a vegetarian or prohibitionist.

Transit Fare Increase

I was certainly amazed, as no doubt everybody else who reads it will be, to see the announcement in The Washington Post that the Capital Transit Co. may request an increase in cash fares to 15 cents. Doesn't the transit company realize that the recent increase in fares is the reason for the decrease in the number of passengers, and therefore, revenue?

It is the pass system in this city that cuts a considerable amount from the revenue of the transit company. Several persons may use the same pass and each obtain more than a normal amount of service from it within the week's time limit.

Of course it would be possible to get a long ride out of one fare, but the bulk of revenue is not derived from the long riders, but those who take the bus or streetcar downtown to perform an errand, to pay a visit, or to get to and from employment. There will certainly be a lot of walking done, and a lot of group riding by car begun if the proposed increase is permitted. G. A. COBURN.

Williams Case

I was deeply concerned and disappointed in the misleading way a usually enlightening paper, such as The Washington Post, handled the story of Ernest B. Williams in the October 14 edition. "St. Elizabeths Patient Held Sane, Freed After 26 Years—Looks Forward to Farm Life" read the headlines. The entire portion of the article on the front page gave the erroneous impression that this unfortunate man had been unjustly detained for 26 years by the hospital authorities.

It was not until one turned to "FREED, Page 2, Column 6" (which most readers fail to do) that the reader learned that Williams was originally charged with shooting and killing a physician who was examining him at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Togue, Md., in May, 1921. These charges were later dropped on grounds of "mental instability."

A hospital for the mentally ill must always serve two distinct and sometimes conflicting functions. It must, first of all, protect the individual patient and do everything possible to hasten his recovery. Secondly, and equally important, it must protect society from dangerous and potentially dangerous patients while they are still sick. Anyone who has any acquaintance with the workings of a modern mental hospital knows how carefully each case is studied, and how every effort is made to encourage the patient's return to society if at all possible. The unfortunate "slanting" of your article on the Williams case does serious injustice to all psychiatric hospitals and creates inexcusable mischief in the minds of countless patients, their relatives and susceptible laymen.

"Faith And Freedom"

Once more The Washington Post, in line with its policy of valiant support of the United States constitutional provision for separation of church and state, has given the public a commanding editorial on October 17, under the heading, "Faith and Freedom." Excellent as the editorial on the whole is judged to be, however, it falls into serious errors needing correction.

I find no fault with your statement that separation of church and state "is not a stick that can be legitimately used to beat a religious minority," but I do express emphatic dissent from the implication that our organization is minded to use such a big stick with such intent.

In an interview given the Associated Press on October 13, I said, "We will fight for the rights of Catholics as well as for all religions in the United States." I think it can be shown that these very groups now organizing have historically so fought, with the consistent effort to secure equal rights for all sects under the Constitution, and with special emphasis on guarantees of the rights of minorities.

Some members of the present groups organizing last spring sent representatives to Rome to make a strenuous effort to induce the Italian Parliament to include guarantees of the rights of religious minorities then suffering despicable religious persecution at the hands of a religious majority in Italy, a persisting persecution which we are requesting the powers to look into at this moment.

I may be excused for saying that the recent Baptist World Congress meeting in Copenhagen appointed a commission of seven from as many countries, of which I am a member, to work for a world crusade in behalf of religious freedom. That commission met in Washington last week and adopted as its program the codification of laws relating to churches and religions in every nation, the undertaking of remedial approaches in every land where persecutions exist, and the active support of the International Bill of Rights, with its provisions for religious liberty, now being considered in the United Nations.

We lament unspeakably the fact that political leaders have at times in American history inveigled certain Protestants to join up with anti-Catholic movements. But none of these groups now organizing for insuring the separation of church and state has ever officially approved of such. Instead, as in the case of the Ku Klux Klan, they have strenuously resisted such movements.

I have personally repeatedly addressed audiences side by side with Catholic priests, Jewish rabbis and ministers of other sects in the American Brotherhood of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. I speak earnestly my wholehearted desire to see our country's unity preserved by adhering strictly to the basis of that unity. Of course, under our American system the only possible basis of such unity is a scrupulous regard for the constitutional provision for absolute separation of church and state guaranteeing religious liberty for all.

Most certainly we would be as much opposed to the President sending a personal representative with the rank of ambassador to any "fountainhead of Protestantism" as we are to his effecting a functioning partnership between the Vatican and the United States Government by what exists now. That is exactly the point we are contending for, and it saddens us that with your otherwise clear grasp of the issues at stake you so completely miss the point, and in addition charge us with a motive so unworthy.

Here is one desperately serious infraction of the American principle of separation between church and state which is deplorably dividing our country at a time when it should be fraternally united, and in effect mischievously representing our Government abroad as acting under the leadership of the Pope, thus adding to the international tensions.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Pomp In Crisis

LONDON.—If you judged merely from the sensational press in England you would conclude that Britishers were about to fly at each other's throats. It's certainly not hard to find bitterness, frustration and defeatism.

This grows out of the manifold regulations imposed by the Labor government now struggling with a major economic crisis. That is the excuse of grumbling citizens who resort to the black market to piece out meager wardrobes or to add variety to a monotonous diet.

Yet, if you scratch even a little way beneath the surface, you find unity, if only in the resentment of what seems from the British perspective to be the harshness of the terms laid down by America since the war. From hard-shelled Tories on the right to ardent Laborites in the government, this crops out in most discussions. Top Britons are firmly convinced that the abrupt ending of lend-lease by President Truman was a violation of a promise made by President Roosevelt, who had said it would continue for a year to 18 months after the war.

It must never be forgotten that the grumbling and bitterness, both public and private, are all within the framework of a traditional system that has a profound hold on the people. Nothing could illustrate this better than the speech from the throne at the ceremonial opening of Parliament.

In his slow, quiet voice, King George VI, in naval uniform, reads the message prepared by his Socialist ministers. It proposes a final step toward socialization of fuel and power. It proposes completion of a far-reaching system of social security. And, finally, it proposes a drastic curb on the veto power of the House of Lords so that they would not be able to block future measures for nationalization.

SEATED before the King as he reads are peers of the realm in morning coats instead of ermine robes, in deference to austerity. Alongside them are peeresses in mink coats and dashing hats in lieu of tiaras. So crowded is the small Lords' chamber that Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin perches in the narrow gallery.

Slowly the King and Queen file out, preceded by elaborately garbed equerries and noble waiting men and women. In the street outside, the state coaches roll away before the eyes of a respectful crowd as the sun breaks through the morning fog and as the outline of the gray buildings of Whitehall becomes sharper. This hardly seems like revolution.

The current economic crisis has compelled the Labor government to abate its program. But its most ardent leaders say that further socialization has merely been postponed.

One of these is Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan, who is in some respects a key figure. Bevan says socialization of the iron and steel industry will come next, and it may come in 1948. The proposed curb on the House of Lords is interpreted as an essential step in this direction.

Informed opinion, however, is that further nationalization will wait at least a year. Although the public may not be fully aware of what is imminent, members of the government are bracing for the shock expected to come some time between December and March. Increasing scarcities will hit the public between the eyes as winter deepens.

SOME LEADERS of the Conservative Party say that the resulting storm will force a general election, and that in the election the Labor majority will be so reduced that the Laborites will have to form a coalition. There is no doubt that the fortunes of the party in power have drastically declined. But even if an election were to be held—and the Laborites insist there will be no election—it's doubtful whether the Socialist majority would be cut below a practical government majority. Twenty-one bye elections, an unprecedented number, have gone for the party in power.

The belief of unbiased observers is that the Socialists continue to hold a large part of the popular vote, including considerable middle-class support. One reason particularly for the latter is doubt about how the workers would react to a Tory government.

You can make a fairly convincing case on paper that nationalization of the coal industry prevented a postwar increase in output. But if the miners had not had a government sympathetic to the long-awaited nationalization, a rash of strikes would certainly have cut deeply into production. There are those who say that a kind of civil war in the coal fields would have come out of any attempt by the Conservatives to enforce the terms of private ownership.

There will certainly be a bitter row over the proposed amendment curbing the Lords. That began in 1910 when a wild-eyed radical named Lloyd George proposed social changes which brought the threat of a veto from the House of Lords. Ever since then, the power of the upper house has been dwindling.

Thus have changes come under this democracy. Doubters and pessimists say the present course means the end of freedoms. But the men now in power believe they can preserve democratic rights in the transition period. That is in direct line with British political tradition.

'Air Freight'

A Communication

IN YOUR editorial of October 7, "Air Freight," you point out that the issues involved in the current competition for air freight traffic are such as to warrant an investigation even broader than that ordered by the CAB, and indicate that the suppression of new competition in favor of companies holding Government certificates would be contrary to the principles of free enterprise generally accepted in this country. Both of these propositions are incontrovertible. However, basic need is not, as you seem to suggest, the formulation of a plan for regulatory protection of the independents from the competition of the certified carriers, subsidized or unsubsidized; and the measure which you advocate —extension of the certification requirement—will tend to bring about precisely the result which you seek to avoid.

The economic significance of the certification requirement depends, of course, on the principles which guide the regulatory agency in granting or denying certificates. Judging by the past administration of this requirement in the air transport field, its essential meaning is this: that a proposed new service covered by the requirement cannot be inaugurated unless: (a) it can be demonstrated in advance to the satisfaction of the CAB that this service will be profitable (or, where the service is to be subsidized, that the necessary subsidy will not be unduly large and that the service can be expected ultimately to be self-supporting) and (b) it is not anticipated that this service will through competition with companies already in the field, reduce their revenues to an extent which would necessitate a substantial curtailment of their operations.

THIS TYPE of regulation clearly tends in at least two ways to hinder the kind of pioneering which is exemplified in the development of the air freight market by the independent carriers. In the first place, the protection offered to existing companies weakens the incentive which potential competition would provide to them to accomplish such pioneering. In the second place, the necessity of proving profitability in advance to the satisfaction of an administrative agency makes virtually impossible, or at least difficult, the inauguration of new ventures which represent substantial departures from types of service provided in the past.

You suggest that certification is necessary to assure adequate safety standards and to enable the freight carriers to remain in business. However, it is perfectly possible to enforce safety regulations as well as high labor standards, without certification—as witness the present regulation of the "irregular" carriers of persons as well as of property. Again, though it may be true that the protection afforded by certification is necessary to enable some of the freight carriers to remain in operation, it may well be asked if it is economically desirable to erect regulatory barriers to the competitive process merely for the sake of assuring the profitability of particular companies.

THE ISSUES raised here obviously transcend the financial difficulties of the independent freight carriers faced with the competition of the established air transport companies, and involve a re-examination of the basis of regulatory policy in the air transport field. In an economy where free enterprise is accepted as the generally desirable method of direction for the productive process, extraordinary circumstances are necessary to justify Government intervention to suppress new competition. The usual justification for such intervention in the so-called "public utilities" markets —intolerable waste of immobilized resources brought about by the competitive process of adjustment of investment—is notably applicable to air transportation.

A possible alternative justification which might be advanced here, namely, the conservation of Government funds through regulatory protection of the revenues of subsidized companies is open to question not only because such a policy achieves Government economy at the expense of efficient service for the commercial users of air transport, but also because the primary aim of subsidization presumably is not—or at any rate should not be—the promotion of the financial welfare of particular companies, but the expansion of investment in air transport as a whole. Thus, if new operations which are suppressed or limited to protect established or subsidized carriers are, from the point of view of national policy, just as deserving of promotion as the protected services themselves, it is reasonable to ask on what basis the latter are entitled to preferential treatment.

THE PROBLEMS involved in the present competitive situation in air transport encompass not only the rationales of regulation as it is now practiced but also the aims, the scope and the method of the subsidization policy. Among the questions which arise in this connection are the following: in view of the great expansion of unsubsidized civil air transport operations since the war, is the subsidy any longer necessary to promote investment in this field? If even this expanded level of investment is not regarded as adequate from the point of view of the national defense, is the present system of subsidization sufficient to support a level which would be adequate? If further promotion of civil air transport through a subsidy is found to be necessary, should the subsidy be limited to established or scheduled carriers, and is the mail rate an adequate or desirable medium for the administration of the subsidy?

It appears then, that the basic need is not, as has been suggested, for the formulation of a protection for the independent carriers, but for a thorough reconsideration of public policy, both regulatory and promotional, toward civil air transportation. It is to be hoped that such a reconsideration will be undertaken by the President's air policy committee, and that its investigation will not, as has too often been true of similar endeavors in the past, be hampered by a desire to defend the aims and content of the existing policies of Government in the field, or to protect vested interests which have come to depend upon the continuation of these policies.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Innocents Abroad

TRIESTE.—The wanderers are going home already. Athens a day or so ago expected only one more congressional visitation. At Rome, after a long summer of grueling waits for lawmakers at air fields, rounds of official appointments and indoctrination lectures, the embassy was visibly beginning to revive. Here in Trieste at the moment, Representative John Lodge was the last, lingering specimen of this new kind of annual migration which has filled all Europe with the bustle of its movement as the passenger pigeons once filled Kansas with the sound of their wings.

The results cannot be gauged by the guarded public statements of the returning Senators and Representatives, although it was encouraging to discover from the Greek press that Representative John Taber had learned all about Stalin. (The next thing you know, someone will tell him about the birds, bees and flowers.) At a guess, in fact, the test of the special session will show that the results of the congressional mass migration to Europe have been better than the public statements would indicate.

THE PROCESS of collision between members of our Congress and the grim facts of our time has been, to be serious about it, extremely reassuring to watch. The goosefiesh-raising horrors of the congressional junkets of the past have not once recurred, although more than 200 members, many of them not averse to pleasure and the bottle, have been loose in Europe this summer.

Without exception, the Senators and Representatives have shown a new sobriety in both senses of the word, and, above all, a desire to learn everything that could be learned. Most of them went through schedules that would have finished men and women not habituated to the grind of campaign trips.

The reactions were so standardized that they can be catalogued rather easily. The relatively small number of members who had already grasped the real nature of the American role in the world despite the distance of the world problem from our shores found in contact with the facts new strength and new reassurance. They will be pretty hard to intimidate or argue with when the special session convenes.

Far more significant, the large, decisive group of middle-of-the-road members was visibly and deeply affected. These were the men who had gone along part way, or had gone along reluctantly, with a constructive American foreign policy. They had feared the political consequences. They had often managed to delude themselves as to the meaning of the facts abroad. With the facts plainly set out before their eyes, they found self-delusion impossible. With evident reluctance, yet surely and rather completely, they moved over to transform the minority of active interventionists into an effective majority.

EQUALLY meaningful, however, was the reaction of the confirmed isolationists. Only one or two of them were open to reason or conviction. They continued to repeat their familiar slogans. Yet they could not wholly brush the facts aside. And thus these men, who have done everything in their power to obstruct measures to prevent war, were suddenly heard saying, all over Europe, that "we might as well have another war and get it over with."

Nothing could better illuminate the degree of willful blindness, of sheer inability to think, which characterizes their position. You would suppose that any sensible man would prefer to spend a few billions on a stable peace rather than talk complacently about another war which will certainly cost hundreds of billions and may result in the collapse of Western civilization. Yet the beginning of the conversion of these men into a preventive war party was quite evident.

On the unfavorable side, one more item of evidence must also be mentioned. As the homecoming statement of Representative Christian A. Herter plainly discloses, even the best-intentioned members of Congress have adopted a sort of political double standard. Under the Victorian double standard, all women were required to be as pure as the driven snow, while the male sex was permitted to frequent saloons and even burlesque shows. Under the new double standard, all European politicians must be willing, at the drop of a hat, to subject their people to the most draconian measures, while American politicians continue to behave like American politicians. This is silly and dangerous.

Nonetheless, the experiment seems to have proved itself. No doubt it will be repeated next year. It is to be hoped that it will. But next year, it might be well for Ambassadors to be relieved of the task of meeting members of Congress at the plane, which must this summer have taken a third of the time of every American chief of mission in Europe. This is going too far even in the education of Congressmen.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Personnel Offices on Pan Again

FEDERAL AGENCY personnel offices and their employes are on the pan again, this time by the House Civil Service Committee.

Kluttz

The committee has ordered agency heads to send it details of their personnel organizations, such as size and salaries now paid in comparison with 1940. The committee questionnaire also asks for a separate letter on these points:

Recommendations for improvements of the Civil Service; benefits, if any, derived from the Federal Personnel Council, and agency and commission practices bearing on recruitment, examinations, classifications, efficiency ratings, promotions and the retirement system.

A similar inquiry of the personnel offices was made a year ago by the House Appropriations Committee. Very little has resulted from it.

THE PRESIDENT'S Civil Rights Committee will have some sound advice for the conduct of the Federal worker loyalty program in its report to be released next week.

It will urge a full and fair hearing for each organization the Attorney General believes to be "subversive." And Attorney General Tom C. Clark, in a letter to the committee, will promise to hear any organization that makes the request.

The committee, while indorsing the general objective of the loyalty program, will warn Federal agencies that they must not disregard the civil rights of employes accused of disloyalty. It will urge fair and impartial hearings of the accused. Also, that the accused be told of the charges against him so he can answer them if he wishes.

THE POSTWAR shakedown of Federal agencies is gradually tapering off. During September, the Government reports a net decrease of 17,000 employes the country over to bring total employment down to 1,766,600. Including overseas employes, the total is now 2,024,000, compared with 3,770,000 at the war peak.

Employment in this city declined only 800 during September to a six-year low mark of 195,200 in the executive agencies. But the September decline was far below the monthly average of this year. There are about 22,000 fewer Government people here now than there were on January 1, and 93,000 under the wartime peak.

NOTES: Treasury has given merit awards to Helen B. Tanner of its Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and Dorenda M. Pennington, a typist in its saving bond division . . . W. E. Crouch, chief of game management for Fish and Wildlife, will retire on November 1 . . . Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming will speak at a dinner meeting Monday night of the Society for Personnel Administration in the YWCA . . . On the same night, Henry C. Iler, Federal Security official, will speak to Labor's AFGE lodge.

VA: The New York employes of Veterans' Administration definitely don't want to transfer to this city. In VA's insurance offices to be moved back here on December 1 are 800 employes, mainly in the clerical class. A survey shows that only 15—or less than 2 per cent—plan to transfer here with their jobs.

However, VA invited only permanent status employes to transfer. Now it has extended the invitation to war service veterans. But there are few takers, which means VA will have about 700 clerical jobs to fill in December.

SEC: The transfer of Securities and Exchange Commission back here from Philadelphia will start the end of November in spite of the housing shortage. There's gossip the move will be called off—but it's so much talk. The SEC move has the personal okay of the President.

The SEC housing committee here is having a most difficult time finding vacant homes and apartments for the agency's employes. However, a hundred or more already have housing and they will commute between here and Philadelphia until SEC gets settled in this city.

CIVIL SERVICE will amend its layoff regulations to provide more intelligent handling of Federal construction project employes whose jobs are abruptly ended by lack of funds, presidential orders, etc.

AMENDMENTS to Civil Service's application blank, its so-called Form 57, was discussed at yesterday's meeting of the Federal Personnel Council. They included:

New questions which ask applicants if they have been members of the Communist Party, or any organization that advocates overthrow of our form of government. Traffic violations which resulted in fines of $25 or less need not be included on the new form. And finally, work in church and other such organizations can be credited toward experience in qualifying for a Civil Service test.

THE NAME of Hugh Mitchell, former Democratic Senator from Washington, is being mentioned for the Federal Communications Commission vacancy. A year ago he rejected an offer to be a member of FCC or any other Federal agency.

CIA: Union membership or activity was not a factor in the "security" firings of any of the several employes by the Central Intelligence Agency. Both CIA and the left-wing United Public Workers (CIO) agrees with the above statement.

Romania Will Try Anti-Reds

Prague, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—The official Yugolav News Agency Tanjug indicated today from Bucharest that all opposition leaders in Communist-dominated Romania will be brought to trial on charges of treason.

The report said that leaders of all three Romanian opposition parties had been implicated in the alleged anti-government plot headed by Juliu Maniu, aged leader of the National Peasant Party.

Meanwhile, in Czechoslovakia, police have filed a request for prosecution of Dr. Fedor Hodza, secretary general of the Slovak Democratic Party, with the Prague attorney general's office, the Czech news agency said. Hodza had been verbally attacked in Parliament recently by Communist Minister of Interior Vaclav Nosek.

Tanjug said from Bucharest that the indictment against Maniu and other Peasant Party leaders charged them with organizing terroristic bands of "war criminals" in preparation for civil war and foreign intervention.

"According to reports of Romanian papers," the agency added, "the chief of the National Liberal Party, Constantin I. C. (Dinu) Bratianu, and the leader of the Independent Social Democratic Party, Titel Petrescu, were implicated in the treason of Maniu and his accomplices."

Former Hungarian Legislator Hanged

Budapest, Oct. 23 (A.P.).—Dr. Gyorgy Donath, a former member of Parliament who had been convicted of "plotting to overthrow" the Hungarian government, was hanged today.

Red Troops Reported Massing on Iran Border

Tehran, Iran, Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Russian troops were reported massing on Iran's northern frontier today to retaliate for this country's rejection of the Soviet-Iranian oil treaty, but the Iranian chief of staff said "there is no reason for alarm."

Gen. Ali Razmara, the chief of staff, discounted the reports of troop movements and rumors that preliminary skirmishing already had begun near Julfa and Astara.

The Gallup Poll

Food Conservation Necessary To Aid Europe, Majority Feel

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 23.—Now that America's second food-saving program since V-J Day is a month old, the proper time has come to study the public's first impressions of the food conservation program headed by industrialist Charles Luckman.

Here are some points that can be made upon analysis of an intensive survey conducted by hundreds of institute interviewers throughout the country:

1. Perhaps the most important observation is that a majority of American adults with opinions believe that real need exists in western Europe for food from this country. Only one out of three believes sacrifice on our part is unjustified.

2. More than 6 out of 10 people say their families plan to follow or are following the suggestion to eat no meat on Tuesdays, while another 4 per cent say they will cooperate whenever possible. Only one fourth contend that meatless Tuesday suggestions are too difficult to carry out.

Today's willingness to follow governmental food-saving suggestions is strikingly similar to that found by polls taken in 1946 during the famine emergency committee's program. In March of that year 56 per cent of American families said they were taking part. By June the figure rose to three out of four families, indicating that present efforts may also gather momentum as people become better informed as to what is expected.

3. Better than nine out of ten people already have either heard or read about President Truman's food-saving scheme, a very high rate of public awareness for any issue. Of those familiar with the plan, six out of ten grasped the idea that the program is designed to save food in order to send relief to European nations. Another 26 per cent mention that objective first and then add another such as reduction of prices or fighting communism.

4. Mr. and Mrs. Consumer also seem to have a fairly clear idea about what the government wants them to do. Interviewers asked this question:

Will you tell me all the things that the government wants you to do in the food-saving program?

The answers:

Fourteen per cent were essentially correct, listing meatless and poultryless days and reduction of bread consumption.

Thirty-six per cent mentioned at least one of the three steps.

Thirty-five per cent said we are asked to cut down on use of grain, grain products, eggs or meat.

Thirty-nine per cent said "eat less and waste less."

Eighteen per cent either did not answer or gave incorrect answers.

(Adds up to more than 100 per cent since some respondents gave more than one answer.)

5. The Administration has a difficult educational job before it to convince a third of the nation that Europe's situation warrants a voluntary rationing program. It would be well-advised, also, on the basis of the above figures, to define clearly each step it wants consumers to take.

TOMORROW: A year ago the public was willing to return to rationing to feed European nations. What is the feeling today? The second article in this series tomorrow will answer that question.

Vatican Paper Queries Russia On Vishinsky Hostility to U. S.

Vatican City, Oct. 23 (A.P.).—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, called on the Soviet Union today to reconcile Prime Minister Stalin's professed desire for improved relations with the United States and Britain with Andrei Vishinsky's blasts in United Nations meetings.

Quoting a news report that Stalin had told British M. P. Konni Zilliacus that Russia asks nothing more than to be able to improve her relations with Great Britain and the United States, L'Osservatore then quoted Deputy Foreign Minister Vishinsky's Lake Success attacks against Americans, and observed:

"Vishinsky spoke yesterday; Stalin several days ago. There was time, therefore, and the possibility to harmonize the ideas and proposals already expressed in Moscow with those declared at Lake Success.

"Why wasn't it done? Why do new reasons for fear, distrust and pessimism have to destroy those which have led to hope?"

Ruling Holds Stampless Ballots Valid

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—An absent voter who neglects to send his local electoral board the 23 cents postage required by law to cover registered mailing of his ballot may still be entitled, under certain circumstances, to have his vote counted.

This appeared to be the effect of a ruling today by Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson in answer to a query from the State Board of Elections, which, in turn, had been questioned by Earle Lutz, executive director for the State Republican Central Committee.

The postage question arose from wording of the absent voters law, as amended by the 1946 General Assembly, and the lack of explicit provisions on what to do if the absentee ballot applicant fails to send the postage.

"The statute contains no express provision dealing with the situation when the postage was not sent with the application, Apperson noted in a letter to Levin Nock Davis, secretary of the State Board of Education.

"However, in view of the express provisions of Section 203 that the failure to enclose postage shall not render void a vote otherwise legally cast, it was apparently contemplated that the voter may receive the ballot even though he did not enclose the postage, so, if the ballot has been sent to him and is voted by him, it should be counted."

Tells of Attacks

Wife Chief Witness at Wills Trial

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—His wife was the chief State witness today as Mervin C. Wills, 20, went on trial in the Allegany County Circuit Court on a first-degree murder charge.

Wills is accused of beating their 18-month-old son, Junion Clinton Wills, so severely he died July 20. He pleaded innocent.

The wife, Mrs. Nancy Joretta Divelbliss Wills, 16, testified for two hours, and told the court her husband beat the child on several occasions, including the day of his death.

She said she was afraid of her husband and did not tell authorities.

She related that on one occasion Wills broke the glass in a hand mirror beating the child, and that another time the baby became unconscious.

The mother told how Wills beat the child's head against a wall, and said that twice she washed blood from the boy's head.

The husband became angry when the boy soiled his clothes and Mrs. Wills quoted him as saying:

"Butchie, I'll train you or break you."

Three Women Get Episcopal Council Posts

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Women's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Province of Washington, at the closing session of the twentieth Synod at St. John's Parish House here this morning, elected Mrs. Charles Raynor, of Salem; Mrs. Henry Mc. R. Pinner, of Suffolk, and Mrs. William R. Taliaferro, of Pittsburgh, to serve on the provincial council.

The province agreed today in an amendment to a provincial ordinance that three women would be elected to the council at each meeting of the synod. Last year, three women served on the council for the first time under the provisions of a resolution.

Most of the meeting this morning was taken up with the discussion of a resolution introduced by Bishop William P. Remington, of Philadelphia, calling for the creation of a commission on evangelism. The synod voted to refer the resolution to the provincial council, with special reference to the department of missions, and went on record as being "tremendously interested in evangelism.

The invitation of Bishop Harold Everett Sawyer, of Erie, Pa., to hold the next meeting of the synod in his city was accepted.

The Rev. Dr. Churchill J. Gibson of Richmond reported that Virginia Seminary, near Alexandria, has inadequate housing facilities to accommodate the number of students and said that four dormitories are needed. A member of the board of trustees for the seminary, Dr. Gibson declared, "If the American way is going to continue, a great deal of responsibility will fall upon our church," and that trained religious leaders will be needed if democracy is to be "the political expression of Christianity."

Reporting for the committee on youth, Mrs. Stanley Rogers of Roanoke recommended that the appropriation of the committee be increased, that yearly meetings of the committee be held, and that a provincial youth convention, to be attended by several hundred young people, be established.

Bricklayer Sentenced For Indecent Exposure

A 38-year-old Berwyn, Md., bricklayer was sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction yesterday, following his conviction in Prince Georges Circuit Court on a charge of indecent exposure.

The defendant, Charles Samuel Martin, 4717 Hollywood rd., was accused by Prince Georges County police of exposing himself to a group of school children whom he accosted in Riverdale, Md., in October, 1946. He was arrested by Detective Richard Pearson several weeks after the reported offense, through a description of his auto furnished by the children.

Jailed on Food Charge

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 23 (AP).—Charles Stewart, chief steward of Lightship No. 5, was sentenced to a day in jail by Magistrate R. J. Flinn yesterday for "willful insubordination."

The specific charge: Stewart attempted to force Capt. Louis Duquet to accept ham and eggs for breakfast when the skipper expressly ordered steak.

British Ban May Not Hurt U. S. Tobacco

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Although the United Kingdom normally purchased one fourth of the United States' flue-cured tobacco, spokesmen for the industry here said they expected no violent results from England's decision to ban imports of American tobacco.

The Federal Government price support program will insure stable tobacco prices, said the tobacco men, as prices broke here following the withdrawal of British purchasers.

However, State Commissioner of Agriculture L. M. Walker, jr., predicted that the effect of the ban on Virginia "will not be healthy."

Flue-cured tobacco accounts for approximately 61 per cent of America's two-billion-pound annual tobacco crop. In Virginia almost all of the 126 million pounds raised this year were flue-cured.

Local optimism stems from a war-time law guaranteeing tobacco growers 90 per cent of parity prices for their crops for two years after the end of the war emergency—until December 31, 1948.

Henry M. Taylor, State Department of Agriculture statistician, gave the following figures today on exports to Britain:

Of the 1,352,000,000-pound flue-cured 1946 crop, the British bought 360 million or 27 per cent.

The previous year, they bought 300 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco out of a total crop of 1,173,708,000 pounds, or 26 per cent. All other tobaccos exported to the United Kingdom amounted to only about 2,200,000 pounds.

Curtailment of Tobacco Export Cuts Prices

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—Price averages on all flue-cured tobacco belts broke sharply today and the weaker demand was attributed partially to the drastic curtailment of tobacco purchased for export.

Danville Market Feels British Ban

Danville, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Old belt tobacco markets were struck a grave blow today as Britain banned tobacco imports from the United States. Prices began to break today as buying companies with British connections slashed purchases. Imperial buyers were pulled off Danville and other markets at noon. Export continued to buy but at a fraction of the normal price.

Achievement Day Meeting Attracts Loudoun Women

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 23.—Two hundred Loudoun County women yesterday attended achievement day for the county Home Demonstration Clubs at Leesburg High School.

Club exhibits were made as a unit, and followed the projects for the year. Blue ribbons were awarded to clubs from Lovettsville, Catoctin, Central and Sycolin. Red ribbons went to Blue Ridge, Watson, Pleasant Valley and Mountain Gap, and yellow ribbons to Pot House and Broad Run clubs.

Mrs. G. Shirley Myers, chairman of the county committee, presided and awards were presented by Miss Mary Moorman, home demonstration agent at large. Mrs. E. Floyd Yates of Powhatan, Va., delegate to the Associated Country Women world meeting in Amsterdam last month, was principal speaker.

Virginia Has Used Almost All Of First Year U. S. Road Fund

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Nearly all Virginia's first year allotment under the three-year Federal-aid program for the postwar improvement of secondary highways has been expended or let to contract, the State Highway Department has reported.

Thus far 79 farm-to-market road construction projects have been let to contract, the department said, extending into 71 of the State's 100 counties. Cost of the projects, exclusive of grading, in most cases has run to almost four million dollars, on which the Federal Government will pay 50 per cent, or roughly two million dollars.

These projects have brought about the hard-surfacing and general improvement of 340 miles on the State's 38,000-mile secondary highway system. The first-year program also has included eight bridges and a small amount of stabilization.

Remaining to be let to contract are three projects, delayed due to the lack of satisfactory bids, or the necessity for new surveys and plans. These jobs should be ready for advertising before winter, highway officials said.

Each county in the State has been allocated a share of the Federal monies, department spokesmen said, with the amount determined on a proportionate basis governed by area, population, and secondary road mileage.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Guard Head Insists It Has Control Of Armory

Gen. Cox Writes Commissioners City Is Not Entitled To Any Revenue

Present laws place full authority and control of the D. C. National Guard Armory in the hands of the D. C. National Guard, its commander, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, asserted yesterday.

Hence, he told the Commissioners in a two-page letter and six-page legal memorandum, "your demand (that Armory rentals be forked over to the District) is considered as not in accordance with the law and facts and, therefore, cannot be met."

The District is not entitled under law to "any or all of the revenue received" from use of the D. C. Armory, General Cox maintained.

Court Fight Hinted

Only Congress has the power to change this law, Cox said. The Commissioners conceded this point, he maintained, by introducing a bill at the last session of Congress seeking authority to control nonmilitary use of the armory.

The Commissioners, who were preparing to attend a Citizens' Food Committee meeting when the document arrived shortly before 3 p. m., declined to comment until they had read it.

The Commissioners had indicated at a Monday meeting with General Cox, however, that they will take the matter to court if they disagree with the general's legal interpretation.

Memorandum Outlined

Under present law, the memorandum pointed out, only the President has authority to give orders to the District's "one army (regular forces and the National Guard.")

The memorandum reminded the Commissioners that the law requires them to "forward" the National Guard's annaual budget request to Congress as writtten.

General Cox denied it is "illegal" for officials of unit associations such as the Headquarters Detachment Association to enter into "occupancy agreement" for armory use, as charged by the Commissioners last week.

Armory rental funds, he announced, will be used to provide armory facilities for the Guard. When such facilities have been obtained, he said, "revenues produced from Armory activities will to a great extent be used toward the maintenance of the Armory, thereby reducing the appropriations required."

Parking Ban Crackdown Set Tomorrow

The Police Department announced yesterday it would crack down on motorists who park on prohibited downtown streets on Saturdays, beginning tomorrow.

In other parking control actions, the District Commissioners increased "no standing" hours on many Washington streets and the Police Department surveyed certain portions of Q and 21st sts. nw. for a possible two-hour parking limitation.

Sundays and holidays are the only days when the no-parking ban for morning and evening rush hours is not in effect in most downtown streets.

On the past two Saturdays, more than 1000 mimeographed warnings have been placed in automobiles parked in downtown Washington, pointing out that Saturday regulations are the same as those on other week days. Tomorrow, those disregarding the all-day and rush-hour parking bans, and any regulations relating to special areas, may expect to receive parking tags, Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the police traffic division, warned.

The Commissioners extended "no standing" hours on some District streets from the present 7:30 to 9 a. m., to the hours of 7 to 9:30 a. m.

The new restrictions, requested by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, will affect most major thoroughfares in the Northwest and downtown areas, and will make "no standing" hours coincide with present "no parking" hours in the morning, Keneipp said. Signs will be changed as soon as possible, according to Keneipp.

A police survey of Q st. between 20th and 21st sts. nw., and 21st st. between Q st. and Florida ave. nw., revealed that 60 householders would not object to a two-hour parking limit in those blocks, while 10 would object, according to Inspector Miller. The ban would be in effect between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

The survey was made as a result of complaints which Traffic Director Keneipp said he has received from professional men that all-day parkers were using up all available space.

Correction

In a story in The Washington Post yesterday it was reported that Miss Eunice F. Hartley would retire from the Government Printing Office today, and a banquet for her would be held Thursday afternoon in the GPO cafeteria.

Miss Hartley will retire October 31, and the banquet will be held at 5:45 p. m. October 30 in the GPO cafeteria. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Here's a Home Where Three Tiny Hearts Beat as One

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

HAPPY RETREAT—At sunset, down on the farm-home of Mrs. Jennie E. Schuermann at Vienna, Va., three small wards of the Children's Protective Association, receive a visit from Miss Elizabeth Lane, a case worker. Miss Lane sits at left on the swing (background) with Mrs. Jennie "Graggy" Baughman, 74, who has lived 48 years on the farm. Between them is Jimmy, 10 months old. In this peaceful scene, Dicky, 3 years old, plays with his mud pies (center, foreground), while on the porch of the old house, Mrs. Schuermann (right), a widow and foster mother, watches over Edie, 10 months, sleeping in a chair. A coon dog and "peg rifle" hanging overhead complete the picture of old Virginia. Mrs. Schuermann provides a foster home for the children, cared for by the Community Chest agency

Young Unable To Name D. C. 'Underminers'

If the District Government is being "undermined," as charged by Commissioner John Russell Young Wednesday night, neither Young nor Police Chief Robert J. Barrett will name names.

Young told the Federation of Business Men's Associations "there are people and groups in this city who are undermining the police."

"The real citizens of the District are faithful to their government," he said, "but there are those who live here who are Red to the bottom and who would grasp the chance to disrupt it."

Asked to name the "people and groups" yesterday, Young said he doesn't know.

Police Chief Barrett, handed a vote of confidence in the Washington Central Labor Union, parried a reporter's question with his ubiquitous retort:

"Ha, ha. No comment. Next question?"

The CLU, in a formal resolution, said "we do not believe the best interests of the District are being served by constant sharpshooting directed toward the chief of our police department."

Press Criticism Decried

"Constant criticism in the daily press can only disrupt the morale of our police," the document said.

It expressed "confidence in the leadership and ability of the police superintendent and with the conviction that only by the wholehearted support of the citizens . . . will they be able to give the District the protection which every citizen has the right to expect."

The resolution was signed by Secretary Frank J. Coleman in a letter to Barrett.

Moviegoers Jam Traffic

Moviegoers, intent on getting a view of the beauteous Esther Williams, flocked to the Capitol Theater last night in such quantities that extra police were detailed to direct traffic around the overflow into F st. Several hundred persons waited around the doors before the 9:30 p. m. stage show.

Farm in Virginia Provides Pleasant Haven For Little Wards of Community Chest Agency

By Charles E. Davis, jr.
Post Reporter

Three small outcasts have found a happy refuge on a rolling, wooded, farm at Vienna, Va.

It is a home lifted from the best pages of rural Americana.

The frame house faces on a gravel road. In dry weather a passing car raises a cloud of dust. But few cars pass.

Behind the house is a barn. On several clotheslines the week's wash waves in a gentle breeze. A kittn peers from beneath a porch. Two pups frolic awkwardly.

Foster Mother's Home

This is the home of Mrs. Jennie E. Schuermann, a widow and foster mother. Here 42 children have found a home and love in the past 11 years.

Mrs. Schuermann provides a foster home for children looked after by the Children's Protective Association, of 1907 S st. nw., a Community Chest agency.

fi6,K the men and wom anupnup

At this times she is caring for three foster children. They are Dickie, who is three years old, and Jimmy and Edie, both 10 months old. The children have one thing in common: misfortune.

Dickie, a serious little fellow whose dark hair is cropped in a crew haircut, was born out of wedlock. Mrs. Schuermann has cared for him since he was three months old. His mother works and pays $45 a month for his board.

Mother Supports Child

Jimmy's father is in the Navy. He had applied for admission to the Navy diving school in Washington. He planned to get an apartment and make a home for his wife and Jimmy. But the Navy decided otherwise. The father was sent overseas. Jimmy's mother is working and paying his $45 a month board.

Like Jimmy, Edie is learning to walk. She is 15 days younger. Like Dickie, she was born to an unwed mother, a 14-year-old high school girl. Her board is paid by the Children's Protective Association. Edie's young mother has agreed to adoption, so the child probably will be placed in a home for adoption next month.

With Mrs. Schuermann lives her mother, Mrs. Jennie Baughman, 74 (known to the children as "Graggy"), her son, Cortice Schuermann, his wife, Phyllis (everyone called her "Happy") and Cortice's 4-year-old daughter, June.

Lifetime on Farm

Mrs. Schuermann has lived on the 32-acre farm since childhood. In 1936 she decided she would like to provide a home for a foster child. She got in touch with the Children's Protective Association and soon a year-old child was placed with her.

Many have come and gone since then. Mrs. Schuermann has kept a complete record of each one in a paper-backed note book.

"Sometimes they come back to see me," she aid. "The other night a girl who was with me until June, 1946, stopped by. She is 16 now and lives in Washington with her mother. She goes to school and has a part-time job after school."

Mrs. Schuermann was widowed in 1941. Her husband, Lawrence, also was fond of children.

The children who go to live with Mrs. Schuermann are assured of good, wholesome food. Three cows supply fresh milk and a flock of 200 chickens answers the problem of poultry an deggs.

There are two hogs which will be slaughtered about the first of the year. The meat will be placed in a frozen food locker at Fairfax operated by the Southern States Cooperative of which Mrs. Schuermann is a member.

Fruit and Vegetables

Mrs. Schuermann has 10 acres planted with alfalfa, and there is a garden which provides fruits and vegetables for seasonal eating and canning.

When Mrs. Schuermann takes children of school age they are sent to the Fairfax School. A bus picks them up and brings them home.

Jimmy and Edie are of playpen age, but Dickie romps outside with 4-year-old June. Dickie and June have a playhouse in back of the house. And pets there are aplenty; a grown dog and two pups, four cats and a baby squirrel picked up in the woods by Cortice Schuermann last week.

All of the children receive frequent checkups at the clinic in Children's Hospital. Dickie, whose mother is now furnishing a home and hopes to have him with her soon, will soon undergo an operation on his eye to correct a defect.

These three children have about 200 counterparts on the rolls of the Children's Protective Association. Some 75 of these children are in their own homes, but need the correctional services provided by the association.

The others are in foster homes or in homes where they have been placed on trial for adoption.

The association, which is finaced entirely by Comunity Chest funds, was founded in 1916 by Juvenile Court Judge J. Wilmer Latimer. The Dickies, the Jimmys and the Edies of next year can be cared for if the annual drive of the Community Chest Federation for funds is successful. The federation goal this year is $3,900,000.

Hecht Truck Burns

A truck belonging to the Hecht Co. was badly damaged from fire last night when it backed too close to a trash fire near the new Silver Spring store at Ellsworth dr. and Fenton st. The truck was carrying trash to be burned. The fire was extinguished by the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department.

Judge Drops Case as Police Lack Warrant

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Gambler-hating Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday dismissed charges against a defendant in a gambling case because police had failed to obtain a warrant before the arrest.

This is the third time within a week that the courts in the District have held that a "man's home is his castle" and cannot be entered by police, even in the performance of their duty, unless legally.

The judge scored the Government prosecutors for bringing before him a case that he termed "a perfectly good case if the police had obtained a warrant to enter a private home."

He instructed the jury that they were to return a vredict of "not guilty" because the officers had failed to obtain a warrant before they entered the home of Mrs. Blanche Jacobs, 35, 709 Maryland ave. ne.

Members of the Metropolitan police vice squad raided the home of Mrs. Jacobs on August 7 and chraged her and seven other defendants with "permitting gaming" and "keeping beer and whisky for sale without a license."

The judge commended the police for their vigilance against gambling but said they would have to learn that they could accomplish their aims "within the framework of the law."

"I have no doubt of the guilt of Mrs. Jacobs," he said, "but I will have to order an acquittal because of the entry of the house without a warrant."

On Tuesday Judge Armand Scott acquitted three defendants of disorderly charges after the defense attorney informed the judge that a policeman had entered their home without securing a warrant.

Last week the District Court of Appeals upheld a verdict of damages against the U. S. Marshal for entering a home without a warrant.

U. S. Agencies Hold Rallies To Aid Chest

Activities of four Federal agencies' Community Chest workers highlighted yesterday's local Chest campaigning.

As general solicitation among Government employes went into its third day, rallies were held at Justice and Agriculture Departments, and groups of State Department volunteer workers made an inspection tour of two Chest agencies.

Already over the top is the Library of Congress, which Tuesday reported oversubscription of its quota by 1.4 per cent. The Library pledged $11,455, distributed among 1368 employes. The Community Chest Federation hopes to raise $3,900,000 this year.

Anderson Praises Chest

Clinton P. Anderson, Secretary of Agriculture, yesterday praised the Chest as a "worthwhile activity" and urged department solicitors to "keep up the good work."

Speaking before an estimated 200 Agriculture employes, the Secretary described the Community Chest as a "community venture which gives us a chance to contribute something to the welfare of the less fortunate."

He pointed out that the war's end had not lessened the Chest's task. Rather, he said, the "program has been magnified."

Several hundred Department of Justice employes, in a rally at Great Hall, heard Payton Ford, acting assistant to the Attorney General, term the campaign "one project we can all agree upon."

Justice Has Rally

Speaking in the absence of Attorney General Clark, Ford asked Justice Department employes to give their "wholehearted support" to the drive. A band concert and the Chest's movie, "The Red Feather," preceded his talk.

Two groups of State Department workers toured the Children's Country Home, a convalescent home for ill and undernourished children at 18th and Bunker Hill rd. ne., and the Boys' Club of Washington at 17th and Massachusetts ave. se., one group visiting each.

Three gatherings of Interior Department employes, meeting at 10 a. m., 2 and 4 p. m. in the department's auditorium, heard pep talks by C. Girard Davidson, Asaistant Secretary.

Folowing each meeting, William O Tufts, budget manager of the D. C. Community Chest, answered questions from the floor. About 1800 Interior Department workers attended the three meetings.

Girl Scouts Help

Fifty Girl Scouts yesterday gained special recognition for their campaign assistance at a Girl Scout court of awards in St. Martin's Catholic Church Parish House, 1900 N. Capitol st.

Letters of commendation were awarded them for sorting 325,000 red feathers and 200,000 window stickers during the summer.

A list of other Community Chest activities yesterday follows:

Campaign unit chairmen met with Edward H. Foley, jr., campaign chairman, at Federation headquarters to hear organization progress reports.

Workers of the special gift unit reported to their chairmen, E. Cortland Parker, at the Burlington Hotel at 12:30.

Solicitors of District 21 of the residential unit toured the Jewish Social Service Agency, 1131 Spring rd. nw.

Solicitors of District 26, residential unit, toured Phyllis Wheatley YWCA, 901 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Mercury At 85 Ties 1901 Record

The thermometer climbed to 85 degrees at 4:14 p. m. yesterday, equaling the all-time high for the date set in 1901.

In the early morning dense fog blanketed the Washington area for several hours, tying up operations at National Airport. More than 25 commercial flights were delayed from 45 minutes to an hour and a half.

Today's forecast: Sunny, with 10- to 20-mile northeasterly winds, and a high of about 70 degrees.

In western Maryland, 14 forest fires were reported burning in three counties. William A. Parr, district forester, said the fires, in Allegany, Garrett, and Washington counties, were under control, but only a general rain would end the fire hazard.

Meanwhile in the west, three inches of snow fell in Denver, Colo. and 8 inches in Lander, Wyo. Wednesday.

District Body Told By Luckman It Is Most Important

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Charles Luckman, chairman of he President's Citizens Food Committee, yesterday told the first meeting of the District Citizens Food Conservation Committee that "this group here is the most important local food group in the United States."

He laid heavy responsibility for success of the entire program on the achievements of the local committee, declaring that "people still look to Washington as the hub of America. There is nationwide respect for what is done in Washington."

Then, he admitted soberly, "the job in Washington has not been the fine example that it can be," quoting from newspaper reports that compliance with meatless Tuesday and poultryless Thursday drives was "spotty."

"A Little Sacrifice"

Luckman declared, "We are going through a crisis and we won't solve it except by a little bit of sacrifice by all involved."

A similar not stressing need for individual sacrifice for successful completion of the drive was sounded by several members of the 77-man committee in the District Building meeting.

Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, who flew here from Knoxville, Tenn., to attend the meeting, said the 1200 members were saving as much food "as any city in the United States," but stated that the success of the restaurant drive is dependent "on getting the consuming public to cooperate."

Wilson said restaurateurs over the Nation are finding that "business is off and they cannot afford to say we can't serve this or can't serve that."

Finds People "Interested"

Isaac Jacobson, president of the Independent Food Distributors' Association, declared that "by and large, persons coming into the stores are interested in the program." He said food business was "off very noticeably on Tuesdays and Thursdays."

The District commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Albert M. Armstrong, recommended the community program be directed toward "the important one in this campaign—the housewife."

Members of the committee offered many suggestions for implementing the food-saving program and promised to get their organizations behind the drive.

Slogans Suggested

Several slogans for the campaign were recommended, such as:

"Food is precious, buy less, waste not."

"Save meat, save wheat, save the peace," which is a national committee slogan.

"Let the seat of the Nation help with the ration."

Mrs. Nat C. Wilson of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross said her group is planning to publish 25,000 copies of an eight-page pamphlet of food-saving suggestions and menus for distribution by the District committee to housewives.

Truck Driver Convicted of Raping Girl, 17

A District Court jury of 11 men and one woman yesterday found Rudolph Valentino Vidi, 21, a truck driver, guilty of raping a 17-year-old blonde salesgirl last July 21.

As the jury did not recommend the death penalty, Vidi, who lives at 213 E st. nw., faces a 10-30-year sentence. The jaunty, black-haired defendant admitted having had intimate relations with the girl while parked in an automobile in the 1600 block of Rhode Island ave. ne. But he asserted the girl acted voluntarily.

This line was adopted by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin who emphasized that the young woman had admitted frequenting after-hour clubs.

Assistant United States Attorney Arthur McLaughlin characterized Vidi as "a no good tough who took advantage of a babe in the woods."

The girl said Vidi boasted: "If you don't give into me I'm going to make you anyway. I'm good at that sort of thing."

The jury deliberated 3½ hours before returning the guilty verdict to Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech. Vidi was turned over to the United States Marshal without bail, pending sentence.

District Jury Slated To Get Sex Case Today

A District Court jury today is slated to weigh the guilt or innocence of James Matthews, 37, accused of carnal knowledge involving assaulting a 14-year-old girl who roomed at his home, 3944 Benning rd. ne.

The alleged victim, a Browne Junior High School student, testified that the defendant called her into a bedroom ostensibly to lecture her on sex.

She declared she was then criminally attacked after being threatened with getting "a broken jaw" unless she acquiesced.

Matthews, who described himself as a physical culturist, made a flat denial of the charge.

Area News in Brief

St. Elizabeths Forced To Sell Dairy Herd

The high cost of raising milk on the hoof is forcing St. Elizabeths to sell its Holstein herd.

Sealed bids will be accepted on 104 breeding and dairy cattle until November 7 at War Assets Administration Customer Service Center, Fourth st. and Jefferson dr. sw., where bids will be opened at 10 a. m., November 10.

All animals must be bid upon separately, but no limitation has been placed on the number of bids for each buyer. The cattle may be inspected at Godding Croft Farm, Fort Foot road, Prince Georges County, November 6 and 7. Purchasers will have to remove the animals in 48 hours after notification of award.

Forty-five cows were recently sold by WAA, and some 300 more animals will be disposed of by next spring, according to Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of the mental institution. The dairy has been in operation more than 50 years.

Dr. Overholser said yesterday that the hospital could buy milk cheaper than the hospital's dairy could produce it. The 40-hour work week, lack of patient-labor, and lack of grazing pasture have made it impractical to continue the herd, he said.

A hearing on charges that an Alexandria, Va., couple obtained money under false pretenses was continued yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey.

The couple, Guy Everett Gladswell, 34, and his 29-year-old wife, of 420 N. Washington st., are charged with purchasing clothing with bad checks and selling them to second-hand stores.

Gladswell said they needed the money to get to Detroit where his wife's 1-year-old son by a previous marriage was coming up for adoption from a foster home.

The continuance was granted to give authorities time for more investigation of the case.

Another Polio Victim

A 2-year-old Arlington, Va., boy was listed by the District Health Department yesterday as greater Washington's forty-ninth polio case this year.

The boy, whose home is in the 3500 block of S. Utah st., was admitted to Children's Hospital Wednesday and his case reported as polio yesterday, health officials said.

So far this year, 19 cases of polio have been reported in the District; 30 in the suburbs, the Health Department revealed.

Last year at this time 112 cases had been reported in the greater Washington area, 24 in the District and 88 in suburban districts, health officials reported.

Johnson Poster Wins

A poster submitted by John Johnson, 3800 Porter st. nw., art student at the George Washington University, yesterday was judged best in the contest to promote the university's homecoming activities beginning October 31.

R. E. Abernathy, 1704 Gales st. se., won second place; Clifford Crawford, 200 11th st. se., third; and a joint entry of Robert Custard, 618 26th st., South Arlington, and Robert Reiss, 611 26th st., South Arlington, was fourth.

3 to 9 Years for Blade

A razor-blade wielder yesterday was sentenced to serve 3 to 9 years in jail after he was convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon.

In pronouncing sentence on Joseph A. Waltower, 27, of 443 Delaware ave. sw., Associate Justice Edward M. Curran, District Court, remarked, "I consider this razor slashing very serious."

Waltower was convicted of slashing John Carroll about the throat and right shoulder with a single-edge blade as the latter sat in the kitchen of his home, 101 H st. se.

According to Carroll he and Waltower had had an argument a week previously over a craps game. At that time, Carroll said, he and Waltower hurled bricks at each other.

Waltower was prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney John O'Leary.

'Prank' Costs $100

Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott yesterday admitted he was a boy once himself, but his pranks didn't include turning in false alarms.

The statement was in a stern lecture to 21-year-old James H. Hawkins of 1654 Park rd. nw., whom Judge Scott fined $100 for pulling the alarm at 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

The judge said he "cannot condone this action" despite Hawkin's plea that he "didn't mean to do it."

900 District Policemen Cram for Exams

OFF DUTY STUDY—Policemen of No. 1 Precinct "bone-up" for forthcoming examinations for promotion, conducted by the Civil Service Commission. Sergt. Maurice F. Prestele assists a station mate with a problem. The cops study when they are not pounding the beat

By John London
Post Reporter

What is the maximum legal of the bell of (1) a scissors grinder and (2) an auctioneer? How often may each ring his bell?

When is or isn't a Congressman vulnerable to arrest, and are oyster shells ashes or garbage in the eyes of the law?

Questions like that are causing some 900 rugged Washington men to wrack their brains in waking moments and toss feverishly in their sleep.

Civil Service examinations shortly will be held for more than 900 Metropolitan policemen from the rank of private to lieutenant—those of the force's some 1700 bluecoats eligible to compete for promotion to the next grade.

As the crucial day approaches, the atmosphere at police headquarters and at the 13 precinct station houses resembles a college campus on the eve of finals.

In every squad room and office, at every station house, policemen going off duty gather in huddles, and questions and answers fly back and forth like shattlecocks.

Daily organized study groups of off-duty men are in progress.

The fortunates—those with accrued leave—are home cramming. Hundreds of others are dedicating every hour, when not working or sleeping, to the "bibles"—police manuals, police regulations, traffic regulations, criminal sections of the District of Columbia and United States codes, laws of arrest and rules of evidence.

Bank accounts as well as rank are at stake: pay grades range from a private first class' $2720.95 to a captain's $5023.29.

Exam results will be averaged in with experience-fitness grades handed out by commanding officers, with 40 per cent for the exam. The averaged mark determines a man's place on the roster for his grade prepared by the Civil Service Commission and from which selections are made as vacancies occur.

N. B. For interested policemen: A scissors grinder's bell may not exceed 2 3-8 inches in diameter, 1 3-8 inches in height; an auctioneer's, 6 inches in diameter, 5 inches in height. An auctioneer can sound his bell but once a day, for no more than five minutes; a scissors grinder can ring to his heart's content—if he doesn't disturb the peace.

A Congressman cannot be arrested while en route to or from Congressional duties except for a felony, breach of peace or treason. And oyster shells are legal in ash receptacles, but agin the law in garbage containers.

WCTU Leader Urges Larger Air Force

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

An Army captain's widow yesterday scored peacetime conscription but urged a larger air force, an overhauling of the Army recruiting system, and keping the atom bomb.

She was Mrs. Caroline E. Coates, president of the District of Columbia WCTU, which opened its annual fall meting at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

Mrs. Coates said that "while I am opposed to peacetime conscription because we are Christian women and peace-loving women, I am not in favor of a peace which would appease any unfair, unjust government." She continued:

"Because of the state of the world and because of the attitude of Russia in amassing supplies and troops, I say that we should conserve our air corps and build it up to its wartime strength. Mrs. Coates added:

"I feel that the Air Corps is all we'll need in event of a war, for the ground forces and Navy won't be of much avail."

Mrs. Coates told the women that "we shouldn't send any more of our boys to war until the Army cleans house, from the officers' roster down."

She claimed that while the Army is rejecting 38 per cent of its applications, the "men who are accepted are being stuffed with beer after they enlist."

Mrs. Coates, is the widow of Capt. Alfred E. Coates, Army bandmaster in World War I.

The Rev. Sam Morris, famous Texas "dry" leader, will address the WCTU meeting today at 8 p. m. at Calvary Church. Another session is set for 2 p. m.

Thorp Hails Paris Parley's Achievement

Assistant Secretary of State Willard Thorp yesterday paid a wholehearted tribute to the work of the 16-nation European conference that met in Paris to draw up a "Marshall Plan" recovery program.

Thorp

He said the report of the Paris conference was "an extraordinary document when one considers that it was prepared in less than 10 weeks, that it constitutes agreement by 16 countries, and that each country has pledged itself to use all its efforts in making its full contribution to the program."

Thorp's statement, made to the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, was the most appreciative comment on the Paris report which has come from any high Administration official. President Truman and Secretary Marshall had welcomed it, but in cautious terms.

Points to Uncertainties

Thorp told his Chicago audience that the European report must be judged by its principles rather than by its estimate that Europe would need 22 billion dollars' worth of supplies in the next four years.

"We can be certain of one thing," said Thorp, "that any estimate of requirements for the next four years is bound to be wrong. For such a period, no one can do more than guess, and there are many uncertainties which no man can foresee."

Although a European collapse would hurt the American economy, Thorp said "the issue should be decided on a broader basis than that."

"First would come chaos," he said, "and out of that would come tyranny, perhaps communism, perhaps resurgent fascism. In all likelihood, the European civilization from which ours descended would eventually be blotted out and a new Dark Age would descend upon the continent. And the values which we have and continue to receive from that part of the world's culture and civilization would be lost to us.

Calls for Sacrifices

"By some sacrifices now we can envisage at least the possibility of a prosperous, stable and democratic Europe. By extending our vision and exerting our strength now we will not deny ourselves the chance of having a strong and friendly partner that will work with us in expanding world prosperity.

"It is a momentous decision, yet I cannot see that the choice is difficult. One way lies certain disaster for Europe; the other offers a real possibility of European recovery."

School Teachers To Hear Lecture By Illustrator

Leonard Weisgard, illustrator and author of children's books, will speak on "An Illustrator Thinks Aloud About Children" at a conference on reading tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel.

The conference, sponsored by 13 professional organizations of teachers and school officers, also will present as speakers Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools; Dr. Donald D. Durrell, dean of the school of education of Boston University, and Dr. Hollis L. Caswell, associate dean of the Columbia University Teachers College.

Miss Ida May Lind, director of elementary supervision and curriculum planning, is general chairman of the conference.

Increased Taxes Urged To Help Virginia Welfare

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Virginia's parents and teachers were urged today to demand increased State taxes in order that the Old Dominion may accomplish its health, education and welfare objectives.

Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington told the Cooperative Education Association, Virginia branch of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, that its members must say to their representatives in the General Assembly: " 'We are willing to pay for them.' "

The State Legislature "would only impose additional taxes if the public indicates a willingness for this to be done," said Fenwick, who is a member of the executive committee of the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care.

"We have honest government, but good government must include meeting the needs of the people," Fenwick asserted in a talk at the annual meeting of the Cooperative Education Association.

He reviewed at length the hospital survey and construction report made public Tuesday and declared that "support and furtherance of the recommendations" in the survey "is the foremost requirement."

He advocated State funds to match Federal and local funds for erection of regional hospitals in areas approved by the hospital survey, increased appropriations for tubercular sanatoria and mental institutions and a separate insituation for inebriates to be financed by State Liquor Control Board profits.

The State association wound up its three-day annual meeting this afternoon after announcing next year's sessions will be held at Roanoke October 25-27.

In other actions this afternoon the State association:

1. Indorsed the Virginia Education Association's program for minimum teacher salaries and increased sick benefits and retirement funds;

2. Expressed appreciation to Governor Tuck and the General Assembly for their stand on educational matters, and

3. Pledged support to the program of hospital expansion advocated by the Virginia Council on Health and Medical Care.

$15 Billions Vacation Outlay Seen in 1950

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—Vacationing America will have spent 11 billion dollars by the end of the year and prospects are that this will increase to 15 billion dollars by 1950, the National Association of Travel officials was told today.

Reporting to the opening sessions of the association's annual convention, Garth Cate, chairman of the association's year-around vacation committee, termed the vacation business "one of America's major industries."

14-Karat Attraction

Esther's Routine Does Swimmingly

By Richard L. Coe

YESTERDAY WAS ESTHER WILLIAMS' day at the Capitol, and seldom have we found the big theater so packed for the first show.

Metro's young lady is the star of the film, "This Time for Keeps," and also appeared as the headline attraction on the stage for the day.

She is much the same sort of person you've found her to be in her picture roles—wholesome, poised and trim. With Michael Dreyfus as her audience stooge, Esther put on more of an act than the usual Hollywood visitor. She led him through rehearsal for a movie love scene and, explaining to him how an actress would do a scene, gave him the gown she was wearing. Underneath her gown Esther was dressed in a gold swimming suit, which was what most of the audience had come to see.

It's a simple act and Esther is likable because she was sporty and wholesome enough to make essentially vulgar material seem better than it was.

The screen's musical finds her supported by such an assortment as Jimmy Durante, Lauritz Melchior, Johnny Johnston, Xavier Cugat and Dame May Whitty. There is an able juvenile in Dick Simmons and Tommy Wonder has a good dance spot.

Producer Joe Pasternak, an old hand at these Technicolor musicals with both "plot" and specialties, has found spots for Durante to do an amusing comedy routine, "I Found the Lost Chord" and "Inka Dinka" with symphonic accompaniment. Melchior offers a couple of familiar arias and launches into Cole Porter's "You'd Be So Easy to Love," the film's best number. Cugat, too, has his moments and never without his chihuahua.

Deadly Plot

The plot is the familiar corn about misunderstanding of young people in love and the importance their elders play in 1.) keeping them apart and 2.) getting them together. It couldn't be deadlier.

You would think the script writers would be able to cook up better stories than these musicals invariably foist upon audiences. This one is more an insult than entertainment.

This script by Gladys Lehman from a story by Erwin Gelsey is so sloppy that in one scene Esther complains she knows nothing about the boy's family. A few minutes later she's talking about what a fine opera singer his father is—Melchior.

While one doesn't expect much from these splashy musical films in the way of plots, their ponderous sententiousness is both annoying and absurd. They always reveal a complete inability to treat a simple theme with light simplicity; these love stories, blown up into lengthy running time, are just one example of the nearly hopelessly static quality of the American screen today.

writers are excessively overpaid or

One of two things is obvious: the their attempts at originality are stymied by front-office insistence on "it's always worked before." Certainly what the screen needs is more freedom, not less.

Jack Powell Scores

The week's stage bill is greatly brightened by Jack Powell, that drummer boy in blackface whose act is always a pleasure to watch and listen to. Getting 10 minutes of comedy out of two drumsticks is certainly an achievement, and Powell makes it a triumph. A beautiful little blonde child near us asked, when he was in the middle of his act, "Mama, is it a monkey?"

Opening act is the Appletons, two girls and a tough guy, who put on an amusing apache number. Nominal headliner is Henny Youngman, a Broadway-type comic, who works with gags and a violin. Today Leslie and Carroll join the bill.

For a Victor Herbert medley, Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestra offers a soprano new to the house, Carol Norman. She's got a high, clear register and fine diction, but suffers from training that allows her to scoop around to a note rather than hitting it on the nose, a matter which ought to be reasonably easy to adjust.

The Fox Movietone News includes a couple of shots that look like the Zoomar technique for the Penn-Columbia and Michigan-Northwestern football games.

TOMORROW: Bits and pieces of theater news add up to a busy weekend about town, reports Richard L. Coe.

"THIS TIME FOR KEEPS." M-G-M release produced by Joe Pasternak. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Screen play by Gladys Lehman from a story by Erwin Gelsey and Lorraine Fielding. Music arranged by Georgie Stoll. At the Capitol.

Too Little Football, Too Much Film Flam in West Point Story

By Orval Hopkins

Some years ago the film people made a movie around a man named Harold "Red" Grange, a popular football hero of the day. Couple of years later they committed a similar deed around Gene Tunney, the boxer, who probably was but a commander then. Ol' Red stank a little. So did the good commander. But that didn't stop the film people.

We now have a piece titled "The Spirit of West Point" working at the Metropolitan. Glenn Davis and Felix Blanchard, Army's great football stars, are featured. They appear to be normal, intelligent, level-headed boys. Blanchard even has certain shy personableness which would get him along fine in the movies. They're not actors, and nobody expects them to be. They're football players and the filmgoer should be privileged to see football when he adjourns to the Met for this one.

What he gets is a short course purporting to show how the Navy turned down "Muscles" Blanchard, practically forcing him into the Army, how Davis rolled out of West Point, then gave it another toss and made it, and how the boys, confronted with the unhappy choice of hauling down some real clinky money at professional football and entering the Army as shavetails, took the Army trail and led a lot of bewildered people to the conclusion that something talks besides money.

Davis and Blanchard are great football players and my heart goes out to them (all that dough. Gee). Alan Hale, jr., and Michael Brown, as two of their teammates, handle their roles very nicely, as does Tom Harmon, who plays himself in the picture. Bill Stern and Harry Wismer try to out-shout each other throughout. It is a tie.

If you want to see some good football shots, stick around for the newsreel.

"SPIRIT OF WEST POINT." Film Classics release produced by Bro-Ros (John W. Rogers and Harry Joe Brown). Screen play by Tom Reed. Original material by Mary Howard. Directed by Ralph Murphy. At the Metropolitan.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Lobbyist With Friends Heading for Trouble

By Drew Pearson

Six years ago, a genial gentleman wearing a broad-brimmed hat and with only a few dollars in his pocket came up from Texas, leaving behind a none too savory reputation. Today, he owns 7000 acres of cotton land around Granger, Tex., 1800 acres and 700 cattle near San Antonio, a 531-acre farm near Poolesville, Md., is on a first-name basis with various Senators, and admits being in on some of the big speculation on the Chicago Grain Exchange.

Pearson

The gentleman in question is ebullient, back-slapping, fast-talking Ralph Moore, whose meteoric rise as a Capitol lobbyist illustrates how a man with a happy smile, a ball-bearing tongue and plenty of gall can roll up a fortune overnight. His career also illustrates how a smart operator can manipulate the commodity market when millions in Europe are starving.

Moore is delightfully frank about his career. Visited some time ago in his converted office building at 1707 N st., the gentleman from Texas sat against a backdrop of mounted longhorns, handsome paintings and ornate gray-green draperies.

"I never have to bribe anybody," he bragged. "It's a bad practice. I just show them how to make a little money. If you give a man $500 or $1000 he feels like he owes you something and that you are trying to bribe him. But if you just show him how to make money, he doesn't feel like he owes you anything. That's what I do with my contacts. That's what I would do with you if I trusted you."

Senators Speculate

Asked whether he handled the grain speculations of any Senators, Moore said that he did not, but that several of them had speculated and usually operated through Bache & Co. in Washington, or Harriss & Vose in New York. (The latter is the firm which handled the cotton speculation of Edith Thomas, wife of the Oklahoma Senator, which this column exposed last year.)

"I don't know whether Senator O'Daniel and Senator Thomas are my best friends on Capitol Hill," Moore said in reply to a direct question.

In reply to another question, he admitted that the former secretary to Senator O'Daniel had made quite a bit of money through his association with Moore.

"When Texas constituents called at Senator O'Daniel's office it is reported that his secretary used to refer them to you, and that you get a lot of lobbying business that way?"

Quite cheerfully Moore admitted this was true.

"A lot of people come to O'Daniel with difficult problems," explained Moore, "and—refers them to me. You can't expect him to refer them to his enemies. Naturally I charge them a fee. I make it right with—by helping him invest in commodities that will bring him a good return." This secretary has now left the employ of Senator O'Daniel, and since he was not available for comment, his name is withheld from publication.

"I expect I have more friends on Capitol Hill than anyone else in town," expanded the genial Texan, looking out his window at his Belgian court beneath.

On the wall beside his desk hung a picture of Ralph Moore with officials of the Jack & Heintz war plant in Cleveland for which the gentleman from Texas did some lobbying. Moore explained that he threw a dinner for 200 Senators and Congressmen in behalf of Jack & Heintz, who were opposing the renegotiation of their war profits.

Another picture showed Moore with Senators Wherry of Nebraska, Thomas of Oklahoma, Bankhead of Alabama and Bushfield of South Dakota, dining at the Mayflower Hotel May 18, 1945. The picture is labeled "Ralph Moore OPA dinner," which the host proudly admitted was one of the most important functions he ever staged in plotting the destruction of price control.

When Moore first came to Washington, he represented only the Texas Cattle Growers Association and the Texas State Grange and the big money started to roll in only after he had helped kill OPA.

Helped Beat Norris

Price control is not the only thing Moore boasts about killing. In 1942 he says he went into Iowa, Michigan, Nebraska and Oklahoma and "put a little money around where it would do the most good" to defeat Senators Clyde Herring, Prentiss Brown, George Norris and Josh Lee.

Moore also said he worked for the right-wing American Democratic National Committee in 1944 and has continued his connections with reactionary chain-publisher Frank Gannett and his Committee for Constitutional Government. He also helped Gannett organize the National Food Conference in Chicago in 1943.

"Making money is easy," said Moore in reply to another question, "if you know what the market is going to do. I'll make you some money right away and it won't cost you a dime, if you'll go easy on me. But I'm afraid of you. I'm afraid you might put it in the paper. If I could only trust you, I could make you quite a few thousand dollars in a hurry."

Moore Gets Caught

The other day, however, Ralph Moore got caught cold in one of his schemes for making quick money.

The Department of Agriculture caught him putting press releases in the pigeonholes of every newspaperman in the Agriculture Department press room. The press release was a bullish survey of the situation on fats and oils, obviously calculated to make the price of fats and oils go up.

The Department of Agriculture press room is set aside for the specific use of that department in giving official information to the press. It is not for the use of private persons, especially lobbyists. When a statement is issued there, it bears the official backing of the United States Government, and great care is taken with these official statements to see they are not used for speculation.

Ralph Moore, however, brazenly ignored these well-known rules.

Fortunately, no newsman fell for his clever press release, obviously aimed at influencing the market, and even listing at the bottom the names of agriculture experts supposed to back up his bullish statements. Upshot of all this is that the Department of Agriculture is referring the operations of one Ralph Moore to the Justice Department with a view to possible criminal prosecution.

So the genial gentleman who has 12 phone lines on his desk, boasts a phone bill of $2200 a month, and brags of having more friends on Capitol Hill than anyone else in Washington, may soon be in a position where his senatorial playboys will think twice about playing with him further.

Petrillo Gives Platter People the Shakes

By Bill Gottlieb

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—James C. Petrillo, no new hand at knocking the amusement industry into a dither, has gone and done it again. All along Broadway, radio and recording executives, top name music artists and platter retailers may be seen shaking nervously ever since, last week, the trucculent, bull-headed leader of the musicians' union carried out his threat to ban recorded music "once and for all."

The incurable optimists claim some "settlement" will be reached before the December 31 deadline. The other 99 per cent remember that the last time Petrillo thundered a comparable proclamation (1941), the record industry jarred to a near standstill for almost two years. And by comparison to his present attitude, he was only kidding back then.

Calls It Smoke Screen

Petrillo's objections to recordings on the ground that they put musicians out of work is, as I see it, a smoke screen. Despite the invention of records, of sound film, of radio and of all the many other mechanical devices for distributing music, there are far more working musicians today than 25 or 50 years ago.

Petrillo's professed mortal enemy, canned music, has stimulated interest in music sufficiently to have actually broadened the musician's labor market. I'm sure that the music czar, narrow as his thinking is on the subject, doesn't really believe records will permanently cut down the general body of musicians.

Anyhow, even the most backward labor groups certainly realize they can't resist technological progress. Petrillo couldn't expect permanently to kill mechanical music any more than the bicycle workers could have killed automobiles.

JAMES PETRILLO
. . . at it again

The most labor can ever do is make a deal that will ease any employment dislocations caused by some new invention. Petrillo indicated his approval of this principle during the last record strike, which he called in order to obtain from disc manufacturers a royalty plan by which a fund could be built. This fund has been used to give work to musicians at large, generally unemployed union members in areas where record and radio work isn't available.

What Petrillo really is gunning for is the Taft-Hartley law, which prohibits the above royalty fund, worthy and sensible as it may be. (The act forbids payments of any kind except to the individuals actually performing.) What the labor leader is saying, in effect, is: "O. K. Congress and O. K. Industry, you brought this one on. Now you can either change the law or cooperate with me in getting around the law."

One way of getting around it would be to get the record companies to agree to pay higher wages. The union could then tax the musicians to the extent of this wage increase. The union would, by this subterfuge, regain the unemployment fund now denied it.

Another hidden target of Petrillo's is the use of recorded radio programs especially on a network basis. Here Petrillo has another valid gripe. Disc jockey shows were economy devices originated by low-budget, independent radio stations. Letting the networks adopt this type of program is as unjustifiable artistically as it is dangerous to the welfare of musicians holding down studio jobs. Since the largest record companies are tied in with the radio networks, I'm sure that Petrillo hopes to gain concessions from the radio people by pressuring their record affiliates.

U. S. Divorce Law Asked

Reno, Oct. 23 (AP).—Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) suggested today that Congress enact a law requiring States to honor divorce decrees issued in other States whenever four basic requirements are met.

In an address prepared for the Washoe County Bar Association, McCarran listed the proposed conditions as follows:

1. That the decree is final.
2. That it is valid in the State where issued.
3. That it contains statements that the jurisdictional requirements of the issuing State have been met.
4. That the State where the decree is issued is the last in which the couple lived together as husband and wife, or that the defendant is personally subject to the issuing State's jurisdiction, or enters a general appearance (submits to the court's jurisdiction) in the proceedings.

"It is not merely a legal interpretation which is here involved," McCarran said, "but the lives of thousands of human beings, whose jeopardy or security should not, in good conscience, be left to determination by the vacillation of a majority of the Supreme Court."

The Senator called attention to arguments in the Supreme Court October 14 involving challenges in the courts of Massachusetts of divorces obtained in Reno and Florida.

During the discussion Justice Jackson suggested that the Supreme Court rewrite the rules on interstate divorces so that a man who remarries after obtaining one can know "whether he has a wife or a lawsuit."

McCarran declared the cure is not a uniform marriage and divorce law for all States, but a statute setting forth a standard for accepting judicial acts, records and proceedings in the divorce courts of one State by the courts of another.

Hoyas Ready to Drub NYU Tonight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

IT COMES UP Georgetown vs. New York U. at Griffith Stadium tonight, and Georgetown men everywhere relive the glory day of 1928 when an underrated Hoya team knocked N. Y. U. out of the Eastern championship. That was the afternoon at Yankee Stadium when Ken Provincial romped 89 yards with an N. Y. U. fumble for the only touchdown of the day.

POVICH

In that era, they called N. Y. U. the violent Violets, and with cause. Coach Chick Meehan took the New York eleven to the heights with an attack featuring Ken Strong running behind the powerful blocking of Ed Hill, Al Lassman and Ken Grant.

N. Y. U. did score that day, but all they got was a safety, given to 'em deliberately by order of Coach Lou Little of Georgetown after G. U. grabbed its 7-0 lead on the muddy field. Then it was that the late Jim Mooney, who was to meet a hero's death in France in 1944, kept the Violets at bay with his booming punts. They called Tackle Mooney out of the line to punt following the safety and he booted a 70-yarder with the soggy ball to the N. Y. U. five-yard line.

NINETEEN YEARS LATER, it's Georgetown in the ascendancy on the gridiron, with N. Y. U. in the throes of deemphasis. The Hoyas will be the favorite tonight, following their brilliant 12-0 victory over Tulsa, a team that had not been beaten at home since 1944, and had not been held scoreless in its last 60 games.

The Violets have won only one of their four games thus far. New York U. beat Brooklyn, 19-0, but was widely outplayed and licked by Temple, Boston University and West Virginia. But Georgetown is not underrating the Violets. The Hoyas looked far from unbeatable the night they tossed off a 16-0 game to St. Louis University.

New York U. is mixing it up this season, operating both from the T-formation and the single wing, under Coach Edward (Hook) Mylin, who was Coach of the Year at Lafayette in 1943. Georgetown knows, too, about Tom Capozzoli, three-year veteran quarterback of the Violets. He set the Hoyas back on their heels last year with a 63-yard punt.

THE MAN TO WATCH in addition to Capozzoli will be big Irving Mondscheim, the Violets' left end, who caught one of Capozzoli's passes and took it 53 yards to a touchdown against the Hoyas last season. Mondscheim lately returned from Europe where he toured with an all-star American track team. His football fame hasn't quite caught up with his track reputation. He has won the national AAU decathlon championship for three years in a row.

This is the first time N. Y. U. has deigned to play the Hoyas in Washington. In most previous seasons, the game was considered too big for Griffith Stadium. It has drawn as many as 70,000 fans to Yankee Stadium. But that was when N. Y. U. was big-time. Now the Violets don't command that kind of a crowd in New York, and Washington gets the thirteenth game of the series between the two schools

Georgetown has won six of the games since 1928, the Violets have won four, and two have been ties. Over that span, Georgetown has scored 99 points, N. Y. U. 103. In their last battle, staged last season, Georgetown was a 19-6 winner.

IN CONTRAST to the frequent changes of head coaches at N. Y. U., Georgetown's has been a tight little coaching dynasty headed by Jack Hagerty since 1932. He appointed Mush Dubofsky and George Murtaugh as his assistants in that year, and they still are. Hagerty doesn't have to produce a winning team at Georgetown, a healthy situation for a coach, but his clubs have always won more than they lost in any season.

Georgetown will be throwing at New York U. perhaps the best line in this area, maybe not excluding Navy's good line. It was the play of Georgetown's young giants up front, notably, Werder, Oberto and Berger, the guards, that held Tulsa scoreless last week. Tulsa was driven into the air, only to run into a stanch secondary defense that was equally effective.

It ought to be a separate sideshow tonight with N. Y. U.'s Capozzoli and Georgetown's Lou Surman in a punting duel. Surman averaged 47 yards against Tulsa, and booted one ball 74 yards. It ought to be good fun tonight.

S. Carolina Beats Out Clemson

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 23 (AP).—A weary but determined band of South Carolina Gamecocks staved off a nearly successful fourth-period Clemson rally to edge the favored Tigers, 21-19, before a capacity State Fair crowd of 25,000 here today.

The accurate point-after-touchdown kicking of Substitute Guard Pete Lane spelled a Southern Conference victory for the Gamecocks as the clock ran out on a final Clemson drive at midfield.

The Tigers outpunched, the Gamecocks often in line plays and had no serious competition to Bobby Gage's and Carl Cox' fine passing. It was an intercepted Clemson pass that cost the Tigers the game.

Giles Goes Over

Momentarily set back by a fumble in the final period when they were trailing, 14-12, the Tigers appeared to be setting up a long scoring march when Gamecock Fullback Bobby Giles, in for Red Harrison, grabbed a Gage throw near the sideline on the Tiger 16 and ran it to the Tiger 1, Giles plunged over on the next play.

From there on out it was a race against time for the Gamecocks, who found fate with them after Clemson took the return kickoff on its fight and marched the distance for a return touchdown.

Bishop Strickland, fast-stepping freshman, went 38 yards around end after a shovel pass for South Carolnia's first touchdown in the opening period. Two plays after the kickoff, Ray Mathews broke over the left side of the Carolina line and went 66 yards for the Clemson tally.

Thompson Scores

South Carolina recovered a partially blocked Clemson punt on the Tigers' 18 early in the second quarter and Droopy Atwell sneaked through center from the two for a touchdown. Again Clemson came right back, this time with a 78-yard drive ending with a successful pass by Carl Cox to Oscar Thompson.

Lane's extra-point placements gave the Gamecocks a slim two-point halftime lead after one of Clemson's extra point kicks went wide and the other was blocked.

The Gamecocks were tiring in the third period, which saw a series of punt interchanges on which Clemson gradually gained, but the fourth-period pass interception and subsequent touchdown staved off defeat for the Gamecocks.

Homecoming May Draw 15,000 Fans

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

New York University, a one-time football powerhouse which is finding the road back to success paved with lopsided defeats, is due for another shellacking tonight, this time by Georgetown at Griffith Stadium.

Once the scourge of the East, the Violets have now faded to not even a shadow of their former selves. They've beaten only Brooklyn College while West Virginia, Temple and Boston University have run over them.

Homecoming Game

Despite the anticipation of a one-sided affair, some 15,000 customers, most of whom will be Hoya students and alumni attending the feature event of Georgetown homecoming ceremonies, are expected to be in the stands for the 8:30 kickoff.

The in-and-out Hoyas, who hit their peak last Saturday with a 12-0 upset over Tulsa, are going for their third triumph. They pasted Fordham, another former Eastern great, downed Tulsa in a major upset and lost to high-ranking Wake Forest and St. Louis.

Although everything points to a Georgetown cakewalk, Coach Jack Hagerty and his Hoya aides remember last year's tussle which Georgetown, doped to win easily, just managed to squeeze by, 19-12.

Raba Leads Attack

Tht Violets have proved vulnerable to pass attacks and end sweeps and spectators can look for Quarterback Elmer Raba to have his pitching arm cocked in action this evening. And Tom Graham, the fancy-stepping sophomore back, will be sent around the flanks when the Hoya spread attack calls for a running play.

Coach Hook Mylin's best offensive bet is Halfback Jerry Eisenman, a good passer, who teams with End George Starke to comprise the NYU battery.

Georgetown		N. Y. U.
Sarashevitz	L. E.	Astor
Dylan	L. T.	Lavelli
Werder	L. G.	Antolis

Central, Roosevelt In Interhigh Feature

Central's Vikings, undefeated in three interhigh games, entertain Roosevelt's Rough Riders at 3:30 p. m. in today's top interhigh game and, if they win, they'll return to a first tie with McKinley Tech.

Tech, unbeaten, untied and unscored upon in four league games, invades New Jersey to tackle Philipsburg High in a nonleague game.

In the two other league contests today, Anacostia's third-place Indians are host to Western's Red Raiders, who are tied for fifth; Calvin Coolidge's defending champs, struggling to move into a tie with Eastern for fourth, cross paths with the cellar dwelling Woodrow Wilson Green Tigers at Wilson. Both games begin at 3:30.

Vikings Favorites

The Vikings are heavily favored to make the Riders their fourth straight victims, but Central Coach Jan Jankowski, who remembers the 1941 and '42 season well, has his boys alerted for a possible upset.

In those seasons, Jan's first two at the Central helm, the Vikings won grid championships. But both times, the Riders, supposedly asleep near the bottom of the standings, ruined Central undefeated records.

Roosevelt Coach Phil Fox has his charges pepped up for the Vikings. The Riders have yet to score, much less win in four games this season. But they have a genuine backfield threat in triple-threater Bernie Mead.

Have Host of Stars

The Vikings have a host of backfield stars in Ross Keith, triple threat, and Jimmy Pantos, Jimmy Panor, Jack Wert and Jimmy Johnson. Their line, lead by Center Moon Million, Tackles Ed Cadeaux and Bob Douglas and Ends Dick Sponsler and Ronnie Dean, has yielded only one touchdown in three interhigh games.

Tomorrow's feature game pits Chamblerlain Vocational School against St. John's at Central Stadium at 2 p. m.

'We're Ready For Penn,' Sailors Say

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23 (AP). — The lights were on late again this evening as Navy's football squad advanced toward the final stages of prepping for the battle with Penn at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Saturday.

Coach Tom Hamilton said his boys were "fired up" for the test, and his blue-jerseyed gridders made no secret of their sentiments.

They tacked up a sign in the locker room to remind themselves and all visitors that "we're over the hump now." They referred to that long string of defeats which they finally snapped last Saturday by trouncing Cornell.

Penn is the first in a parade of football powers remaining on the Middies' schedule. After the undefeated Red and Blue, Navy meets Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Penn State and Army.

"We're getting ready for them one by one," Hamilton declared. "With that kind of lineup, you have to work as hard as possible for each Saturday as it comes—without letting up a bit."

Navy football solons are well acquainted with one of Penn Coach George Munger's chief threats. Tony Minisi, brilliant runner and passer who has been Penn's offensive pacesetter most of the season, romped for Navy two years ago.

And Al McCully, getting back in trim after a rocky start with injuries, is well aware of the talents of another Penn back, Ray Dooney.

Bednarik Back In Penn Lineup

Philadelphia, Oct. 23 (AP).—Big Chuck Bednarik, University of Pennsylvania's star center, will be able to play against Navy Saturday.

That was the good news received by Coach George Munger from team physician, Dr. J. W. Welte, as the Red and Blue drilled on several new trick plays. Bednarik, who was kicked in the back in last Saturday's game with Columbia, went through a light workout today.

Rockets, Yanks Play Tonight

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Chicago Rockets battle the New York Yankees in their All-America conference game at Soldier Field tomorrow night and if the Rockets win it will be the biggest upset for them since November 24, 1946, when they last won a football game.

By coincidence, the Yankees were the Rockets' last victim, 38 to 28, in New York.

The Rockets will be handicapped by the absence of their most valuable back, Elroy Hirsch, side lined with a leg injury.

Kickoff—8:30 p. m. (CST).

In Miami Tonight

G. W. Eager To Win One For Stahley

Miami, Fla., Oct. 23.—With not a win to show for their four games this season, George Washington University's Colonials take the field in the Orange Bowl tomorrow night against the Hurricanes of the University of Miami, determined to "win one for Skip."

"Skip" is Neil J. (Skip) Stahley, whose coaching career is 17 years old, and who is in his second year at the helm of the Colonials. This has been a turbulent year for the 38-year-old coach because never before has any of his teams lost four games in a row. Never before has a Stahley coached team suffered a losing season.

Regardless of the high spirit of the Colonial team, which arrived here early this evening and worked out at Coral Gables, G. W. will be the decided undergod when the kickoff takes place before an expected crowd of 25,000.

The Hurricanes, themselves, have won only once in four games and that one by a slim 7-6 score over Rollins College. But they have shown potential strength against three other good teams.

They held Villanova to a 7-7 tie and lost, 19-7, to Baylor and 19-6 to Texas Christian. In each of their games the Hurricanes have exhibited power in the first half, scoring all their points before intermission. They lost to Baylor and T. C. U. because they slumped in the third and fourth periods.

One of the features of tomorrow's game should be the punting duel between Miami's Harry Ghaul and G. W.'s Bill Spangler, both among the leaders in their regions.

Stahley is hoping that his passing attack, weak in past games, will improve. Tossing for the Colonials will be Halfback Frank Cavallo and Howie Williams, and doing the receiving will be Ends Dick Koester and Frank Close.

Probable starting lineups:

George Washington		Miami
Koester	L. E.	Yovicsin
Bullard	L. T.	Settembre
Sanders	L. G.	Garifeo
Druckenmiller	Center	Doyle
Regan	R. G.	De Marco
Shipman	R. T.	Seay

Terps' Play Makes Tatum Very Unhappy

The old crying towel—every football coach has one—was flapping in the breeze at the University of Maryland yesterday.

Coach Jim Tatum said he's never seen a football team fold up as fast as the Maryland Terrapins have since Duke beat them 19-7 last Saturday.

He prescribed three hours of tough scrimmage again yesterday as the Terps prepare for what Tatum quietly hinted may be their annihilation at the hands of Virginia Poly at Blacksburg Saturday. He said so in a whisper that probably reverberated all the way to Blacksburg.

"I think Duke took all the football out of our boys," he said. "They're not the same bunch I saw at the beginning of the season. They're tired and listless."

Tatum also hinted that Coach Jimmy Kitts is guilty of some dark doings last Saturday at West Point, where the Gobblers absorbed a 40-0 licking from Army.

Kitts, said Tatum, didn't play his first and second teams very long against Army. He saved them for Maryland and let the scrubs take the punishment.

"I'm more worried than I thought I'd be," said Tatum. They'll maul us."

Amateur Boxers Fight Tonight

Willie Wright, a GI, stationed at Bolling Field, and Kid Moore of the Billy Edwards Athletic Club, meet tonight in the feature boxing match of the 13-bout card, sponsored by the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Association at Turner's Arena.

Other bouts:

Gilbert Sockwell, 110 (Southwest Settlement) vs. Joseph Jackson, 107 (Banks A.C.); Joe Thompson, 113 (Randell) vs. Ignicio Butler, 111 (Southeast Settlement); Percy Bertha, 122 (Southeast Settlement) vs. Eddie Gilcrist, 117 (Banks A.C.); George Coles, 118 (Randell) vs. Lincoln Pearson, 118 (Wolves); Joe Graham, 133 (Edwards A.C.) vs. Jimmy Hawkins, 135 (Y.M.C.A.); Lacey Coles, 126 (Randell) vs. Berth Thompson, 127 (Chapel Oaks A.C.); Ernest Barton, 138 (Chapel Oaks A.C.) vs. Sylvester Temple, 138 (Randell); Jimmy Finnely, 137 (Carters A.C.) vs. Eddie DeLoach, 135 (Edwards A.C.); Carold Wilson, 133 (Chapel Oaks) vs. Lee Herald, 131 (Wolves); Billy Brock, 131 (Banks) vs. George Crasty, 128 (Southwest); Frank Ball, 138 (Southwest) vs. Pugsy Lyons, 135 (Apollo); Eddie Grant, 139 (Apollo) vs. Leroy Brown, 205 (Carters).

Springfield Faces Lions

Paul Courteau, "Flying Frenchman" who played with the old Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium between 1939-42, will lead the Springfield Indians against Washington's Lions in an American Hockey League match at Uline Arena tonight.

The Indians, 4-1 conquerors of the champion Hershey (Pa.) Bears, will be represented by two other former local favorites in Keith Allen, defenseman and a teammate of Courteau with the old Eagles, and Don Webster, defenseman who performed with the Eastern League Lions two years ago.

The Lions will be bidding for their third successive victory on home ice tonight. They have beaten the Philadelphia Rockets, 6-2, and the New Haven Ramblers, 4-3, here.

Villanova Faces Boston College

Boston, Oct. 23 (AP).—Rugged Villanova, defeated only by Army, and Boston College, which has lost only to Louisiana State, will play their thirteenth game in a sporadic series tomorrow night at Braves Field before a crowd expected to exceed 30,000.

The home Eagles, whose single loss was by a 14-13 score, again will have the services of Fullback Ed Songin who sat out last week with a sore ankle.

Cotton, Ryder Cuppers Ooze Confidence on Arrival in U. S.

By Gayle Talbot

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Something new in the way of British sports teams reached these shores today when the redoubtable Henry Cotton led his Ryder Cup golfers down the Queen Mary's gangplank.

Henry and his fellow professionals made it immediately and abundantly clear that they expect to wallop the pick of this country's money players in their two-day international match at Portland, Oreg., November 1 and 2.

"We didn't come over here to lose," Cotton said a couple of minutes after his feet hit the pier. "We have a team of sound players and we have every bit of confidence. This is the best cup team I've ever played on."

This was most unusual. It has been customary in such cases for the sporting visitor from Britain to venture that "we intend to have a jolly good try at you fellows," but never, either directly or by implication, to admit that he was thinking seriously of winning.

The men who got in today obviously are a different breed of cats. Not only Cotton, but each of them, individually, declared without coaxing that he was a member of a fine golf team imbued with a winning spirit.

"I don't believe we've ever had a team with as wonderful spirit as this one has," said Dai Rees, the little Welsh star. "Everyone likes everyone else, and all we are thinking about is winning. We should have a fine match at Portland.

Cotton reminded his fellow players and reporters that the British professionals never had won on this side since the Ryder Cup matches started in 1929, but added willingly that "we hope to do better than the other teams."

Besides Cotton and Rees, the British squad includes Fred Daly of Ireland, British open and PGA champion; James Adams of Scotland, and Max Faulkner, Reginald Horne, Sam King, Arthur Lees, Eric Green and Charles Ward, all of England. Commander Roe is along as secretary and business manager.

Commander Roe was perturbed at a report circulated in England that members of the team were outfitted with spanking new wardrobes for the trip, in violation of that nation's strict clothing ration. Actually, he said, each man received only the customary blue Ryder Cup team jacket to wear with his well-worn slacks.

Week's Votes Go to U.S.C., Penn, S.M.U.

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Another edition of the football guessing special goes to press with its author hanging on to an average of .797 on 235 correct predictions and 60 misses and trying stubbornly to get over the .800 mark:

Southern California vs. California—it's things like this that make football forecasting a hazardous business. One shaky vote for Southern Cal.

Minnesota vs. Michigan—Somebody may slow down those wonderful Wolverines before the season ends but Minnesota doesn't look to be the one to keep them from rolling into the Rose Bowl with the Big Nine title. A confident vote for Michigan.

Rice vs. Texas—A 10-gallon hat full of votes for Texas.

Army vs. Columbia—Lou Little's Lions are having their troubles and this won't help. One big vote for Army.

Duke vs. Wake Forest—Having hurdled North Carolina, which in turn took William and Mary out of the picture, the unbeaten Deacons now come up to the biggest test between them and the Southern Conference title. The flip of the coin says Wake Forest.

Illinois vs. Purdue—Three or four votes for Illinois.

Navy vs. Pennsylvania — Now that the Middies know how it feels to win, they might give the powerful Quakers their first real wrestle of the season. However, several carefree votes for Penn.

Southern Methodist vs. UCLA—It looks like a whale of a game. Southern Methodist.

Iowa vs. Notre Dame—This looks like another pitching duel and it could be the toughest yet for the unbeaten Irish. But we'll cast the usual ballot for Notre Dame.

Alabama vs. Georgia—In a close one, Alabama.

Baylor vs. Texas A. and M.—No other choice, Baylor.

The Citadel vs. Georgia Tech—Mighty thoughtful of the schedule makers to help the unbeaten Yellow Jackets, Georgia Tech.

West Virginia vs. Penn State—With both teams all-victorious, something has to give here. Mark this down for Penn State.

Texas Christian vs. Oklahoma—Out of the hat, Oklahoma.

Southern League Asks Repeal of Baseball's Bonus

One-Man Team Plays St. Mary's

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—Washington College's one-man football team, Frank Macielag, will appear in a new role Saturday when the Sho'men go to Emmitsburg to play Mount St. Mary's.

Macielag has played at tackle in Washington's two games—and losses—this season. Coach George Ekaitis is shifting him to fullback against the Mountaineers. Just in case, Macielag also can play center. Al Crimmins will move into Macielag's tackle spot.

DEAR FOLKS:

Workmen were busy this morning repairing the first jump on the grandstand side of the steeplechase course. A jumper named Invulnerable, racing in Wednesday's infield event, "walked" through the brush on one occasion and left a V-shaped gap. One of the fans remarked that Invulnerable proved the fence wasn't. Jockey Al Snider has been engaged to ride Miss Mommy in the Selima for E. E. D. Shaffer. Willie Garner, scheduled to come up from Kentucky for the mount, will be unable to fulfill the engagement because of an injury. It is reported that Snifter, other half of the Shaffer entry, may be handled by Johnny Gilbert. Jockey Don Padgett, leading rider here, returned from an unsuccessful invasion of Jamaica where his mount Brookfield was far back in the Interborough Handicap. Trainer Jack Skinner and Jockey Tommy Field continue to dominate the steeplechase game at this point. This pair had accounted for four of the seven infield events run so far. Charlton Clay's Lea Lark, fourth in the recent Frizette Stakes at Jamaica, was an arrival to kee, her engagement in the Selima Stakes Saturday. See you on the rail. BILL.

Loop Seeks To Renew High Bidding

New Orleans, Oct. 23 (AP).—Southern Association directors moved today to eliminate baseball's present bonus rule and remove "any bonus tag from players who now have it."

The action was taken in a resolution unanimously adopted at hte annual directors' meeting.

President Charles Hurth, who made the announcement, said the recommendation will be presented as an amendment at the minor league meeting at Miami in December.

"If we succeed in repealing the present bonus rule," Hurth explained, "we would revert to the old system, which allowed clubs to pay a player any amount they wanted without having him designated as a bonus player.

The present bonus rule has only been effective since February 15."

In the event that the Southern League recommendation is defeated, Hurth said a second amendment would be offered, permitting clubs to pay up to $6000, the major league ceiling, before a player becomes a bonus player.

"Our present top is $3000," Hurth said. "This is a sliding scale, going as low as $800—salary and bonus—for players in Class 'D' leagues."

A third resolution, adopted without dissent at today's meeting, sets the number of rookies to be carried by teams in class "B," "C" and "D" leagues.

"This proposed change si designed to insure a more adequate supply of young ball players coming up from smaller leagues. It allows class 'B' clubs to have eight rookies, class 'C' 10 and class 'D' 12," Hurth said.

Apologies, W. & L., For Error About Virginia Series

THIS IS TO apologize to Washington and Lee University for an error in The Washington Post's account of the W&L-Virginia football game, won by Virginia, 32-7.

The account of the game said that "Washington and Lee hasn't scored more than seven points against Virginia since their 13-to-13 tie in 1929."

By Jack Bell

FOLLOWING AN INSPECTION tour early this month of hunting areas in Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset, Eastern Shore counties, Director of Game and Inland Fish Ernest A. Vaughn expressed an opinion that deer apparently have greatly increased, but he was disappointed to find a scarcity of native wood and black ducks.

Accompanied by Edwin M. Barry, newly appointed assistant who is in charge of wildlife restoration work under the Pittman-Robertson Act, Vaughan also inspected work being done with Maryland's share of funds in the Pomocoke State Forest.

The party saw plenty of rabbits and quail in a section that was noted one time only as the best coon hunting grounds in the State.

After a recent inspection tour of Allegany, Garrett and Washington, northwestern counties, the officials report there is an abundance of rabbits, ruffed grouse and wild turkey.

SINCE LAST HUNTING season, to augment surviving turkeys, 375 wild turkey, mostly hens, were released. Before the opening November 15 of the upland game season an additional 150 birds are to be released.

Farmers in Garrett County report considerable damage to their buckwheat fields caused by deer, in some instances damage valued as much as several hundred dollars.

During a conference with county commissioners at Oakland, an idea developed to charge hunters an extra $5 for big game hunting in order to provide a damage fund.

However, the most favored plan is the planting of marginal feeding strips adjoining wooded areas on those farms that have been damaged by deer. Farmers are urged to report damage to their county agent, and plantings of soy beans will be made next spring.

Culpeper Faces Monroe Tonight

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 23—Culpeper High's Blue Devils, leading Northern Virginia's Class B football teams with three victories and no losses, play James Monroe High of Fredericksburg here tomorrow night.

Monroe outweighs Culpeper, but is underdog. Monroe's star is Triple-threater Prandy Mills. Stars for Culpeper are Guards Dick Herbert and Doug Grady.

Wolgast to Help Stribling's Foe

Washington boxing fans who remember Midget Wolgast when he was the world's flyweight champion will have a chance to see how he operates as a trainer Monday night when the little Philadelphian comes to Turner's Arena to second Johnny Walker in his 10-round match against Ken Stribling, the local colored middleweight.

A fellow townsman of Walker, Wolgast has been helping train Johnny for Manager Chris Dundee, and thinks the premedical student will win going away.

Genancoke Easily Wins Ogle 'Chase, Sets Record

Sun Bath Wilts, Loses Early Lead

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 23.—Equaling the track record, Paul Mellon's Genancoke ran and leaped his way to an easy victory in the $10,000 added Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap today. The grey son of Gino shook off early contention, jumped perfectly and went about the 2 miles over 13 fences in 3:50 2/5 to match the course mark held by Abmisk.

Genancoke, trained by John T. Skinner, finished far out in front of a photo for second position in which the camera voted for Robert W. Grant's Sun Bath over Miss Ella Widener's Adaptable. Kent Miller's War Battle was fourth and the only other finisher.

Two Jockeys Thrown

Brookmeade Stable's Greek Flag and Thomas T. Mott's Floating Isle were eliminated when they lost their riders. Neither horses nor jockys were injured, however.

Genancoke, excellently handled by Jockey T. Field, was a favorite, having won his previous start here by some 40 lengths and paid a $5.20 mutuel.

Sun Bath gave his backers a chance to cheer in the early stages when he stuck along with Genanooke, but once Field asked the 5-year-old for speed, it was all over but the payoff. Sun Bath was tiring at the end and all but lost the place money to Adaptable's belated charge.

Camargo, Oberod Score

The Christiana Stable entry of Camargo and Oberod dominated the King's Daughter event, the day's secondary feature. Camargo charged around the leaders to take command and Oberod turned on speed in the stretch to nose W. L. Brann's Legendra out of the place position, the entry taking first and second money in the test of a mile and 70 yards.

Backers of the entry collected an across-the-board mutuel of $3.40, $3.80 and $2.40. Jockey M. N. Gonzalez rode the winner. Time of 1:43 4/5 was registered by Camargo.

The daily double paid a healthy $421.80 with most of that price being supplied by Kentmere Miss, a surprise winner of the second race at a $55.40 pay-off. The first event went to Mrs. A. Moore's Jab Me, $16.40 shot.

Cap. Airlines' September Net At 20-Year Top

By S. Oliver Goodman

September net income of Capital Airlines soared to $116,721, best figure for that month in the corporation's 20-year history, President J. H. Carmichael reported yesterday.

Carmichael

In addition, $220,210 in retroactive air mail pay was applied to the month's net, making a total of $336,931.

September was the second month so far this year to be recorded in black ink. The other seven months were heavily in the red. For the nine months ended September 30, the Washington-based airline showed a net deficit of $2,478,766.

Last month's operating revenues totaled $2,107,253, as compared with $1,734,811 in the same 1946 month. Despite heavier traffic, operating expenses were cut to $1,666,539, as contrasted with $1,868,647 in September, 1946.

Carmichael yesterday said: "Naturally, we are pleased that Capital is again in the black. The steady increase in traffic during the past few months indicates this airline's possibilities. We intend to continue every effort to increase revenue and to keep expenses as low as is possible."

Capital, formerly known as Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, currently has a payroll of about $130, of whom about 40 per cent work in Washington and nearby Virginia.

BANK LOANS UP: Loans of the 19 Washington banks stood at $228,723,000 on October 6, a gain of $14,831,000 since June 30 and up $67,729,000 since the first of the year. Security holdings totaled $576,628,000 on October 6, down sharply from the $595,607,000 on June 30 and $659,019,000 on September 30 last year. These facts were revealed yesterday in a compilation by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

SOLVENCY RECORD: Banks are setting an all-time record for solvency and safety despite a sharp upward trend in so-called risk loans, H. Earl Cook, director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, said yesterday. "We think it highly desirable that banks assume risks, so long as they charge rates commensurate with the risks," Cook told the National Association of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers in Baltimore. "We have urged special care regarding real estate at present inflated prices," Cook added. "We urge banks to maintain high down payments and shorter periods of amortization and consumer credit."

Street Revels Described at Struck Plant

Denton, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—The trial of Irwin J. Jaffe, assistant regional organizer for Baltimore of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (AFL) on disorderly conduct charges was recessed late today after an afternoon of testimony emphasized reports of street revelry at a struck button plant.

Jaffe was arrested October 7 at Ridgely, after the union called a walkout at the Ridgely and Federalsburg plants of the Excelsior Pearl Works. The trial of Lawrence Christopher of Federalsburg, arrested at Ridgely the same day on a similar charge, was expected to follow the conclusion of the Jaffe case tomorrow.

"Hugging and Loving"

George Slaughter, who said he lives across the street from the Ridgely plant, told Judge J. Owen Knotts that "little girls who looked not more than 15 years old had beer cans to their lips." He said boys and girls "were messing around the street" and "hugging and loving and dancing."

"If I had been man enough I'd have broken it up," he told the court.

Martin L. Sutton, mayor of Ridgely, said he heard "vile language" and saw "disorderly driving of automobiles." He asserted the group in the street obstructed traffic.

Traffic Charge Denied

Robert Gladney, a representative of the ILGWU, denied that traffic had been obstructed.

Jaffe said he had assumed responsibility for the beer party in order to prevent mass arrests.

Approximately half of about 400 workers at the two plants have been involved in the strike.

Union represetnatives said the stoppage was called after the company refused to recognize the ILGWU as a bargaining agent.

Charges against Ford involved a two-year-old case involving a loss of $400,000. Specifications said he caused a conflagration in a 72-lane bowling center in 1945, and set another fire in the building's ruins three months later.

Plane Wreck Inquiry Solves Pilot's Death

Marion, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Only the details of funeral arrangements remained unsettled tonight as the logical solution of the mysterious death of a former B-29 pilot on Virginia's highest mountain more than a year ago was determined after three days of investigation.

Christopher A. Sulzbach, 29, of Richmond, N. Y., has been identified as the pilot of the ill-fated Cessna C-78 which crashed into the side of Mount Rogers near here on a rainy, foggy night in October, 1946.

The plane and pilot had disappeared on the night of October 12, 1946, on a flight from Tennessee to Camden, N. J., for the Central Airport Flying Service. Tuesday, Roy Greer of Pulaski found the wreckage after his hunting dogs ran across the remains of the plane about halfway up Mount Rogers in Grayson County.

An unofficial investigating party, headed by Col. Wyatt Exum of Pulaski, first viewed the scene of the crash, bringing back sufficient clues for the identification, which is still a tentative one.

Sulzbach's wife and mother were notified by the Central Airport Flying Service last night of the young flier's death. Mrs. Sulzbach is expected to arrive here tomorrow and arrange final details of the disposal of the body.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, former president of DePauw University, will deliver the principal address, and Dr. Ensor will give his inaugural message after being inducted by Bishop James Henry Straughn, president of the board of trustees.

Other participants will include bishop Charles Wesley Flint, resident bishop of the Washington area, several Methodist church organizations, officials of the State Department of Education and representatives of several schools throughout the nation.

Fare Bites Cabbie

Fort Wayne, Ind. (U.P.)—Leonard Smith, taxi driver, is going to take a second look at his fares to see if they look like "the bitting type." A fare refused to pay for his ride. When Smith forced him from the cab, the customer bit the cabbie's finger.

How to Impress

Seattle (U.P.)—Charles D. Yearka found the perfect way to make a lasting impression on his girl's parents. The parents were waiting in the living room when he brought his fiancee home. He failed to make the turn into the driveway and plunged his car into the house in a scramble of mortar, framework and wallpaper.

Va. Welfare Cases Increasing Over 2 Postwar Years

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Reflecting a slight but steady month-to-month increase over the post-war years, the September report of the State Department of Public Welfare today showed the financial case load to be up 1 per cent over August and expenditures up .8 per cent.

A total of 27,870 persons received financial assistance in September, as against 27,601 in August. The figure for September was 12.7 per cent greater than that for September, 1946, when 24,739 persons were aided.

Expenditures last month totalled $623,341, as compared with August disbursments of $618,374. September expenditures were up by 27.8 per cent over the corresponding month last year, when $487,869 was paid out.

The September financial assistance load was up in all categories. Old age assistance added 78 cases over August. Aid to dependent children rose by 38 cases, the blind gained 15, regular foster care, 35, and general relief showed the largest addition, 103 cases.

Drug Aids Patients To Recover Speech

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—Sodium amytal the sedative and hypnotic used in some psychiatric practice to make patients talk more freely, has aided persons whilost their powders of speech following physicol injury to the brain centers, a physician reported today.

Dr. Louis Linn, a member of the neurological service of the Mount Sinai hospital, New York, said he and a fellow neurologist first observed the effect while on military duty in North Africa during the war. Men suffering from a speech impairment after brain injuries improved "suddenly and dramatically" when the drug was used.

Montgomery Board Awaits Reaction to Improvement Plan

The Montgomery County Commissioners were awaiting public reaction yesterday toward their new policy adopted this week whereby the commissioners will provide part of street improvement costs in urban areas.

Prior to Tuesday's action, which commits the commissioners to bear a third of the costs of widening and improving urban streets, the entire cost waa borne by adjacent property owners on a front foot assessment basis. Under that plan, property owners desirous of obtaining better streets petitioned the county to do the work and then paid for it.

The new county-participating method would in effect place a third of the cost on the county as a whole, since the county's share would be paid out of tax revenues.

County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr said yesterday he did not know what the reaction would be, adding that the commissioners were anxious to find out. The policy will be followed, he said, as long as funds are available and was initated not only "to let the people know we are interested in improving the streets but to cut down on future maintenance."

One county official estimated it would cost 100 million dollars to improve all streets in need of such work.

First two streets to be improved under the new policy will be St. Lawrence dr. from Old Bladensburg rd. to Cherry Tree lane, and Dallas ave. from Forest Glen rd. to Tanark Way, both in Silver Spring.

Self-Propelled Seaplane Berth Tested by Navy

The Navy disclosed yesterday that it has tested successfully a self-propelled seaplane berth which moves out from the shore on a 600-fot cable to simplify the mooring of woter borne aircraft.

It is composed of 134 pontoons which are so assembled that it can be raised or lowered in the water in a manner similar to a floating drydock. The berth also can be swung about in any direction to permit a plane on the water to taxi into the wind while entering or leaving the slip.

Morgenthau charges that our State Department's inaction and British "politics" blocked the rescue of thousands of Nazi victims

IN a Collier's article that is packed with political TNT, Henry Morgenthau today hurls serious charges at some former members of the State Department and their opposite numbers in London.

The former Secretary of the Treasury makes the following accusations against the State Department:

1. Utterly failing to prevent the extermination of Jews in German-controlled Europe.
2. Hiding their gross procrastination behind such window dressing as "intergovernmental organizations to survey the whole refugee problem."
3. Suppressing for two months, reports to the State Department on German atrocities after publication of similar reports had "intensified" public pressure for action.

In March 1943, it was thought there was a good chance of saving 70,000 Jews in France and Rumania, provided funds could be got into Switzerland. The State Department, with the connivance of the British Foreign Office, managed to pigeonhole that project until December, Mr. Morgenthau reveals.

Only with the establishment of the War Refugee Board, declares Mr. Morgenthau, was the urgent task of snatching victims from the torture chamber put on an efficient and systematic basis.

In the final installment of the Morgenthau Diaries, the author sows a mine field of controversy. Read it first in Collier's today, then sit back and watch the fireworks.

Young Women Make Business of Problems to Solve

By Bessie Hackett

Is your wife "too busy" to go on a vacation with you? Do you need someone to talk her into the idea? Do you want someone to go along when you buy a hat . . . help you decide? Do you want a "bon voyage" bottle of wine delivered to a ship sailing from New York? Do you need someone to receive your business calls and mail while you're out of town?

Or are you planning to swim across the Pacific and need a substantial pair of water wings and someone to arrange right of way with King Neptune? Or perhaps you need something more complicated . . . like finding a maid to scrub floors . . .

If you drop in on Kay Turner and Jane Marilley, they'll probably solve your problem for you.

These two attractive, young, gray-eyed, brown-haired Washingtonians have solved all kinds of unusual problems since going into business as Courtesy Associates last April.

Agree on Idea

Last fall the two friends, graduates of Trinity College, cast about for a business idea. At the time, Mrs. Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Galiher, was with the applied physics laboratory of Johns Hopkins University, and Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. X. Marilley, was working for Aviation News.

Should it be photography? A candy shop? Some special service? What did Washington need most? An all-purpose service, they agreed, topped by that all-important commodity—courtesy.

Most lucrative to start with, they decided, were telephone-answering and mail-address service, baby sitting, party and cruise arrangements, hotel and theater reservations. Hardest job was finding office space with adequate telephone facilities. One disappointment followed another, but on April 1 they finally set up shop and switchboard in the Evans Building on New York ave.

Record Good—So Far

The girls boast they can fill any personal-service job within reason—and so far they've made good.

One of their first clients was a harassed businessman who stated desperately:

"I'm going on a two-week vacation to California, and I'd like to take my wife with me . . . but we have six children and no one to leave them with. I want you to find someone to care for them and the house—then talk my wife in going with me."

He leaned back with the air of a man who has asked the impossible.

Wife Is Persuaded

Undaunted, Jane and Kay arranged a meeting between the wife and one of their most capable housekeepers. Kay raved about the wonders of California, and the wife let herself be persuaded. The vacation stretched to three weeks.

Recently they scoured the town and canvassed their friends until they located a pair of "ounce" scales for a doting father who wanted to weigh the progress of his prematurely born son, but couldn't afford to buy a new pair of these scales. He's rented the set for two months.

Lucky Breaks

The girls admit they've had some lucky breaks, too. Like the time a call came in on their switchboard for a Philadelphia concern that manufactures blades for meat grinders. A Washington butcher had broken the knife on his machine and needed another in a hurry. The girls had just received a small package of samples. "What's your serial number?" they asked, holding their breath. They had it! And the butcher received his new blade within a few minutes—never knowing he'd only been talking to an answering service.

"I want a clock like the one advertised in this magazine," was another request.

"We'll get it for you," promised Jane. Discovering the clock was not yet in production, she wired the factory, got an advance model.

The youngest for which a baby-sitter was furnished was a 2-week-old infant; the oldest, an octogenarian. The latter was a retired physician who wanted someone to talk to. The George Washington University law student the girls sent out to "sit," has been back several times to visit his aged friend.

A mother going out of town for the weekend requested a chaperone for her teen-age daughter who was dated up for Friday and Saturday. She wanted a personable, matronly woman to stay in the house, greet the girl's friend and be up when the young couple returned at night.

Arrange Weddings, Too

Kay and Jane have provided complete wedding service—from arranging for the church and sending out several hundred invitations to writing the bride's thank-you

Rupert Hughes Eats His Cake, Has It, Too!

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

FOR YEARS we've been lapping up everything we can get our hands on about diet, exercise, sensible living. We've touched our toes, wolfed vitamins in the raw, determined to stay put eight hours on our "beauty-rest." By sheer strength of character we've carried out these admirable resolutions for as much as a day.

Now, at a party given by Mrs. Martin Vogel, we've met a man who, to our way of thinking, has found the perfect way of living. He's Author Rupert Hughes, here for too brief a moment, testifying at the Un-American Activities Committee.

HERE'S WHAT Mr. Hughes has to say:

"Diet? My stomach's as strong as an ostrich's. I eat anything and everything." "Exercise? Sure I get a lot. I walk from elevator to taxi—and back. I keep in trim lifting coffee cups and lighting cigars." "Rest? When I'm writing I work all night. Haven't too much time to sleep days."

"Smoking? I follow Mark Twain's rule, 'I never ruin my health with irregularities. I never smoke when I'm asleep. I never smoke two cigars at the same time.' I smoke all day long. Some of my cigars are specially made in Havana. Some are given to me."

"Drink? Here, I'm most particular. I only drink Daiquiris—and only on grand occasions."

Don't Overdo High Heels or Low

A recent Gallup poll on "the typical American" revealed that one out of every three of us complain that our feet hurt. Isn't it silly that one-third of a nation should walk around with—and on—aches and pains? Silly, that is, in view of the fact that podiatrists and chiropodists inform us there is no need for most of the discomfort that exists.

Here are some pointers recently issued by Dr. Benjamin Kauth, head of the Podiatry Society's Foot Care Institute:

HIGH HEELS. The forward thrust of high heels can do things to both feet and posture. For one thing it may cramp the big toe and contribute to annoyances like bunions, corns and calluses. Moreover, it tends to throw the body forward at an abnormal angle, causing a compensating backward movement which might encourage curvature of the spine. Excessive wearing of high heels may shorten calf muscles considerably through their disuse. The answer to all these ills is not to dispense with high heels, since the requirements of fashion and good looks make any such solution impossible. The answer is rather not to wear high heels all the time.

LOW HEELS. After wearing nothing but high heels for several weeks, avoid a sudden shift to flats. Such a move could cause a violent stretching of your calf muscles, with unpleasant cramps as the result.

Man Has One Fault to Find With Otherwise Charming Lady; When They Dine Out, She Trades Glances With Chaps She Doesn't Know

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My question is directed at a baffling aspect of behavior in an otherwise very charming lady. Although she isn't beautiful, she is attractive and knows it; and I am deeply interested in her.

In all my observations of her personality and conduct I feel perfectly at ease about her, with one exception. To explain: In restaurants or other public places, where the company remains seated, I have repeatedly noticed that this lady's gaze roams about the room and fixes on a gentleman's eyes until he is aware of it.

On occasion, as many as three or four men are aware of her scrutiny; and they keep glancing at her and she seems to keep tabs on their glances. Otherwise her face is expressionless and I see no evidence of flirting.

He Never Feels Alone With Her

SOME MEN are more attracted to her eyes than others; and in one instance a chap seated nearby kept his eyes fastened on hers for a long time. When I spoke to her about it, she laughed it off, saying she hadn't noticed. But I do feel that she had attracted his attention—and it doesn't seem to be a thoughtless habit.

I never feel that I am alone with her when we dine together. On the contrary, I feel mighty uncomfortable to be with a lady whose conduct makes her the cynosure of appraising eyes. If my concern in the matter amounts to jealousy, I plead guilty. But I would like your analysis of the significance of her behavior.

F. R.

Lady Doubts Her Power to Charm

DEAR F. R.: The lady's behavior signifies that she isn't at all sure of her attractiveness; and also that she subscribes to a false, self betraying set of values when trying to bulwark her self esteem.

Obviously she confuses rampant sex appeal with true feminine charm and lasting love-worthiness; and her veiled ogling of men is an attempt to conjure evidence—in line with her misguided concepts—that she is a fascinator, vibrant with magnetism.

Her unconscious motivation for so doing is two-fold, of course. On the one hand, she is trying to give her self esteem a shot in the arm; and on the other hand, trying to sell you indirectly the conviction that she is a pearl of great price,—that you are indeed a lucky fellow to have the company of a woman who is (as you say) the cynosure of other men's eyes.

In a sense, she is passing the hat for tribute, putting herself in an ignominious light in the eyes of worldly-wise discerning people who happen to notice, and the attention she collects thereby—in the form of responsive questioning glance—is certainly no compliment. When other men return her deliberate scrutiny, they are asking by implication: "Are you signaling invitation to a pck-up approach?"

Man Has Reason To Feel Chagrined

THUS in my opinion your feelings of discomfort at such goings-on are quite justified. Your distressed reaction doesn't spell jealousy but rather embarrassment, such as any self respecting man and devoted cavalier would suffer on seeing his lady fall short of dignity and decorum in public places and become the object of cynical appraisal.

Doubtless this interpretation of her behavior will be deeply disturbing, at first shock, to the lady; but if she takes it to heart and repudiates her false standards and foolish ways, she is bound to become increasingly attractive and lovable to those who really care for the good that is in her. And she might study Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's book, "On Being a Real Person," (published by Harper & Brothers) as a guide in that endeavor.

Rules for Keeping Cold From Getting Head Start

Common-sense resolutions for keeping that old bugaboo, the cold, from getting a head start, are listed in the October issue of Charm, Magazine for the Business Girl. Included are:

1. I will give up a date for one long night of sleep when I need it rather than sacrifice a week in bed.
2. Drink more than eight glasses of water a day.
3. Refrain from crowding lunch hours with shopping errands that leave only a few minutes for a gobbled sandwich.
4. Take a brisk walk to and from the office when there's no time for other exercise.
5. Avoid an "after-hours" curriculum that can be more tiring than a hard day at the office.
6. Dodge crowded places during an epidemic or when very tired; beware of drafts, very hot rooms.
7. Tackle a threatening throat by gargling with one teaspoon of salt in a tumbler of warm water.
8. Sleep in a well-ventilated room.
9. Run—but fast—to the doctor when I can't shake off that bugaboo, the common cold.

To Celebrate Indian Fete At Reception

DUSSEHRA, the first Indian festival to be celebrated at the Indian Embassy, is the occasion for a reception this afternoon at which Mme. Aruna Saf Ali, wife of the Ambassador, will be hostess to Indian ladies and children living in Washington.

The festival marks the victory of Rama, hero of the well-known Indian epic—Ramayana, over Ravana, the demon King of Lanka (modern Ceylon). Rama is India's ideal of filial piety and kingly virtues. His wife Sita, the model of truth, purity and wifely devotion, is the cherished ideal of Hindu womanhood all over India.

Netherlands Dinner

THE Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Kleffens will honor Dr. William Schermerhorn, former Prime Minister of the Netherlands, at a dinner tomorrow evening. Among the guests will be Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, former United States Ambassador to the Netherlands, and Mrs. Hornbeck; Mrs. Walter Foote, whose husband is former United States Consul General to the Netherlands East Indies, and Dr. H. M. Hirschfeld, economic adviser of the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

notes. They've provided courses in eitquette and poise, gone shopping with customers who haven't enough confidence to buy their own hats; they've stored furs sent back from abroad and do seasonal shopping for people in foreign lands. They've filled secretarial jobs, provided maids, laundresses, clerks.

Girl Friday

Girl Friday of Courtesy Associates is tall, slender Margaret Abell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Abell of Washington, formerly of Baltimore. A graduate of Holton-Arms and Connecticut College for Women, Marg was all set for a Caribbean cruise when she was appointed on a gift-distribution committee with Jane and Kay, who were about to launch their business. The partners talked Marg out of her cruise and into working for them.

Round World Flight

And did you know Kay and Jane are the girls behind the round-the-world flight of those two much-in-the-news Washingtonians, Clifford Evans and George Truman?

Jane, a licensed pilot, met the boys at the airfield; in fact, George was her flight instructor. George and Cliff got the idea they could fly around the world in small planes. Jane introduced them to a friend at the Piper Cub factory—then the whole thing dropped in the lap of Courtesy Associates.

Would they arrange everything, please?

"Those clearances were a lot of headaches," recalls Jane. "But we did get a liberal education," laughs Kay.

writer. Right now I'm working on two or three books, a couple of plays, 10 or 12 articles. My Pekinese, Skeeter, stays in the room while I write, keeps me company.

"What, of all the books I've written, do I like best? Well, at the moment, two novels. 'Stately Timber,' which is about early New England days; 'The City of Angels,' which is about life in Los Angeles." "Am I continuing biographies on George Washington? Yes, I've published three volumes, there are two more to come."

"WHY DID I come to testify at the trial? Though I'm not doing any at the moment, I've done a lot of writing for the moving pictures. I realized Communist propaganda was being spread, for a long time I've been fighting it on the radio, by writing and by other means."

Mr. Hughes mentioned he was going to New York—so—what does he do in New York? "I'm like a farmer. I bring my cabbages with me. I sell them, get orders for more, go back to California to write."

THUS, BY PERSISTENCE, having dented Mr. Hughes' vitality the merest fraction, we toss in the following facts about our hero. He's shortish, darkish, at present unmarried. Born in Missouri, he's owner of a Phi Beta Kappa key, an MA degree from Yale, has toiled on such widely divergent endeavour as Godey's Magazine, and the Encyclopedia Brittanica.

He has turned out such vice-versas as "Tess of the Storm Country" and "The Story of Tom Dewey."

Mr. Hughes has had a swell military record: Ended up as major in 1919, helped organize the California National Guard before the last war, left as a colonel in 1943. He's like a shot of liver, penicillin, sulpha and benzedrine, combined. Thanks, Mrs. Vogel, for a wonderful evening!

Mrs. Fries Is Hostess for Scottish Rite

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, wife of Major General Fries, entertained at luncheon yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel for the wives of members of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite Masonic organization, who are here for the bi-annual convention of the organization. Mrs. Fries was appointed official hostess for the ladies.

Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, was honor guest yesterday and other guests were Mrs. Llewellyn L. Callaway, Mrs. W. S. Cooks, Mrs. Robert S. Crump, Mrs. Sanford G. Donaldson, Miss Mary-Louise Donaldson, Mrs. Mark I. Forkner, Mrs. W. B. Roberts, Mrs. Thomas J. Harkins, Miss Frances Hall, Mrs. William Koch, Mrs. Charles A. McAlister, Miss Hankie Woodside, Mrs. N. Young, Mrs. Rupert F. Asplund and Mrs. James D. Collins.

Following the luncheon there was a fashion show.

This evening Mrs. Fries will entertain at dinner at the Army and Navy Club for the visitors. A hat show with Jangos as models will be held by Philip Robertson, young Washington designer.

The program will be sponsored by the public relations, radio and extension departments of which Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, Mrs. John Dunham and Mrs. Frank J. Mulkern are chairmen.

Honored guests will include Mrs. Katherine B. Merritt, editor of the District Club Woman; Mrs. Mildred White Wells, editor of the General Federation Club Woman; Ruth Crane of Station WMAL and the club editors of the local papers; Miss Frances Lide, Star; Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, Times-Herald, and Miss Genevieve Reynolds, The Washington Post.

Army Nurses' Chief Will Be Honored

Lieut. Col. Mary G. Phillips, new chief of Army Nursing Corps, and Lieut. Col. J. Gertrude Thompson, retiring chief nurse at Walter Reed General Hospital, will be honored by the Washington Chapter of Army School of Nursing Alumnae Association at a dinner tomorrow evening at the Kenesaw.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

ELEANOR POWELL, only girl to tap step up the ladder of Hollywood to full-fledged stardom, will open at the Cairo next Wednesday.

She'll be surrounded by a glossy revue—comedians, singers, beauties—even marionettes. Two new dance bands will bow in at the Cairo on Wednesday, too. Jerry Rodis (remember him from Trade Winds?) will lead an American style band while Senor Velos heads a rumba crew . . . Meantime, never miss the incomparable Ted Lewis show.

There's a hot bum that Bob Simpson and his band now playing in the Sazerac Room of the Old New Orleans will appear at the Capitol Theater late in November.

BROWN DERBY GOES DACHE. No plain old derby is the Brown Derby any more. Its strictly a Lili Dache model in chartreuse and Chinese red. This chi-chi effect has been achieved by Decorator Charlie Zeller, who's glorified many a club and cafe around town . . . This uppity atmosphere is accented by pianist-parodist Ted Rolfe, late of Boston's Latin Quarter and Manhattan's 23 Room.

CLUB K IS LEAPING. That's no four-alarm fire and general riot at Club Kavakos. It's only Freddie Masters and his band making Spike Jones look like a big sissy. They call themselves the Merry Music Makers which is something like Frankenstein saying, "I'm little Bo Peep." They make music—in a way. They also make you crazy . . . After Mr. Masters and his M. M. M.s, anything will be an anticlimax. But Bill Kavakos also promises Sonny Dunham, Ray Anthony and Ted Weems very shortly.

Many people will be sorry to hear that Maurice Kafka, partner of famed Sidney of the Mayflower, after collapsing at his office is still a very sick man at George Washington U. Hospital.

LOVE IN BLOOM — PERENNIALLY. For the 13 years of their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Morris E. Bowling of Arlington have celebrated all their wedding anniversaries at the Lotus, always ask the band to play "Stardust" on these occasions . . . Mr. and Mrs. T. Raymond Zepp have dropped into the Balalaika practically every week since their honeymoon some six or seven years ago. Mr. Zepp is the manager of the Portner, first envisioned the possibilities of a tony nitery in otherwise idle building space. The Balalaika is the result of his inspiration.

BRIGHT BOYS AT THE PIANO. In the Raleigh Hotel's cocktail room you'll find a new pianist, Arcady Ignatieff. He's from Shanghai, has played all over Europe and Asia, speaks six languages . . . Epicures of music sit quietly becharmed in the Cafe Caprice while Rodolf Cornejo plays Chopin nocturnes with a true and delicate touch . . . Which reminds that "Trestezze," the Italian tune pianoed so excellently by Dick Koons in the King Cole Room, is a version of Chopin's E-Major Etude.

A pair of stop-and-go special cocktails have been devised by the mixers of the Stratford Hotel's Hunt Club lounge. One of the cocktails is red, the other green.

BA-A-AD BOYS. Something of a rapscallion, but mighty funny, is Danny Goodman, the new song-and-joke chap at Cross Roads. His songs are Dwight Fiskish and he looks something like that old boy may have looked in 1920 . . . Jack "Jive" Schafer of the Casino Royal is at it again—this time with a ballad called, "Have a Good Time In Your Prime." He also toys around with an indelicate version of "Somebody Else Has Taken My Place" . . . Merry-Land Ko-Ko Nuts lose every inhibition in their zoological presentation of "Our Hour of Love."

CHICKEN—THAT VERSATILE BIRD. Chicken cacciatore is something right from heaven as served at Ciro's. They bring it out steaming, savory, wine-seasoned, in a pottery dish . . . At the Hamilton Hotel you'll find fat Philadelphia capon, roasted and with well-made dressing . . . Ruby Foo's gives you chicken fried Chinese style with mushroom sauce, likewise sweet and sour chicken (yum!) . . . At La Salle du Bois, our friend, the chicken, appears as "coq au vin Bourguignonne," and very elegant it is . . . For good plain American fried chicken, crisp and tender, it's hard to beat the popular Neptune Room . . . At River Bend they have a special kind of fried chicken that most folks love. It features big fat chickens fried in deep fat according to a recipe devised by proprietor Bob Gilliland . . . The Good chicken glorification in "Bar Lor Gai Pen" which is Chinese for white meat chicken with pineapple.

When the Boys' Club from Detroit came to the Annapolis Hotel on their Washington sightseeing trip, naturally they couldn't get into the Anchor Room. So what did Georgia and Jerry do? They had their piano rolled into the lobby, gave a special performance, made 300 kids happy.

Robert Montgomery Tells of Strange Coincidence

On Page One you've been reading about Robert Montgomery of Hollywood. In this corner of the paper you can get the latest about Robert Montgomery of 714 Marietta pl. nw.

This Bob Montgomery is the pianist with the orchestra at the Fiesta. His wife, the former Kay Linton, used to be the vocalist with the band.

Kay retired some time ago, to give her full attention to the raising of a family—and the first addition arrived at Sibley Hospital the other day.

Of course Bob did his part by pacing the waiting room floor nervously until the nurse appeared and announced:

"It's a boy, and he was born at exactly 4:03 p. m."

After assuring himself that Robert, jr., was the very finest boy on the premises, Bob went home.

On arriving there, he found that the family clock had stopped—at precisely 4:03 p.m.

ADD SIGNS

The Seco Theater in Silver Spring has currently booked the double-feature to end all double-features. It's:

My Brother Talks to Horses and
They Won't Believe Me

PERSONAL NOTES

Jimmy Main, Berwyn, Md.: Thanks. To my sorrow, I've already discovered that "Red's Back in Town" was a publicity stunt for a brand of whisky. I suspected that one from the start, if you'll recall.

BARGAIN

James M. Pickens of 417 Dorset ave., Chevy Chase, Md., brings us up to date on how things are going in the hinterlands:

"This is pumpkin time in Delaware. The fields are dotted with potential Hallowe'en lanterns, and the roads are cluttered with pumpkin-laden trucks.

"In Bridgeville the other day I saw 12 trucks lined up for weighing or something. A friend who wanted to buy a pumpkin for home use asked the price. The answer was:

"'Twelve dollars a ton'."

HOW MUCH WAS IT NEW?

Irving Cooper of 2916 Georgia ave. nw. forwards an ad clipped from our esteemed afternoon contemporary.

It offers a 1941 Studebaker for $11,195.

GREEK PROBLEM

"Euripides?" my tailor sighed,
Noting my trousers' tattered knees;
"I did," I readily replied,
"But won't Eumenides?"
—Jay Aitch.

PATTING PAT

The other day we mentioned the sign "Pat, Your Hairdresser." The item prompted Eva A. Shepherd of 3800 New Hampshire ave. nw. to recall an interesting incident.

When Eva first came to Washington in 1935 (she was a Hoosier—practically a neighbor of mine) she had Pat bob her hair and give her a permanent.

Later she visited New York, and dropped into a beauty shop there. The New York operator praised her permanent to the skies, and asked where she'd gotten it. So Eva reports:

"Pat got a pat on the back in New York, and for once I heard one hairdresser praise another hairdresser's work. Under the circumstances, what's wrong with patting Pat?"

Nothing, but I hope our business office sends Pat a bill for all this free advertising.

CARDINAL SIN

Emmet Dougherty of Catholic University writes:

"If there are any District Liners whose home life is incompatible, they may get some ideas on marital bliss by hearing Father Magner's talk on 'Can Modern Marriage Succeed'? Friday night at the Mayflower."

Thus far, Mr. Dougherty, the only time I've found District Liners hard to get along with was when I didn't spell their names correctly.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

Two Needy Writers Win Hit Song

Harry Rosenthal, the pianist, attests to this story, which concerns a top song hit of the past decade: One afternoon Rosenthal sat with two songwriters whose fortunes had turned. Walter Donaldson, author of "My Blue Heaven," and Harry Von Tilzer, whose hits include "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nelly," wandered into the room. They were joined by three other songwriters of equal prominence. The seven songwriters started to write a song, each contributing a line or a bar of music. The authorship was a composite one.

"Let's play two poker hands," Donaldson suggested, "winners to get the words and music." The hands were played. Donaldson, Von Tilzer and their three friends discarded pairs, etc. The two needy writers "won" the hit-song.

TRAVEL NOTE: This is how Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Anderson were invited by the Greek government to attend the Athens premiere of "Joan of Lorraine": A Greek newspaperman first was sent to Anderson, to sound him out. Then several prominent Greek-Americans, including a Skouras, went to Anderson, who assured them that he would accept.

As further assurance, the playwright obtained his passport and visa, then bought a dinner jacket—the first one he ever owned. With this conclusive proof that the invitation would be accepted, the Greek government then formally extended its invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson.

SOCIAL NOTE: Irwin Shaw, Charles Jackson and Peter Viertel were invited to Maxwell Anderson's home in New City last Sunday. "Alan Lerner has just rented Burgess Meredith's house," Anderson told them, "and we can go over there for tennis and swimming."

The three writers arrived in New City Sunday morning with large bags in which they had packed their sports equipment. Jackson donned his swimming trunks and robe, while Shaw and Viertel put on their tennis outfits. Then they drove to the Lerner house. One half of the tennis court was uprooted. They went to the pool. It was empty.

BUSINESS DEPT.: A noted magazine writer took his latest short story to his agent, who read it and said that it was one of the best the author ever had written. "I'm sure I can get the Saturday Evening Post or Collier's or Woman's Home Companion to buy it," said the agent.

The author shook his head. "I don't want it published in those magazines," he said. "I want it in the New Yorker. I've never been able to crack the New Yorker magazine" . . . "That's easy," said the agent. He destroyed the last two paragraphs of the story and said: "This'll do it."

NEWS DEPT.: Joe DiMaggio has decided to play in exhibition ball games this year . . . John Hammond is leaving for Prague next week. He'll return with the rights to all Czech music recordings.

Robert Ruark and Norman Katkov will finish writing their play next week . . . The Buick car raffled by the Greeters Club, which sold 31,000 tickets at 50 cents, was won by Benny Davis, the songwriter.

His Excellency, the Governor of Wisconsin, showed Payson-Re's Stork Club band one night how "On Wisconsin" really should be played.

John Gunther's "Inside U.S.A." sold more than 12,000 copies last week, six months after publication.

DRAMA DEPT.: Jimmy Savo, who is returning to Cafe Society Uptown at his peak salary, once was involved in a law suit because his agent, Sam Lyons, had described him as the finest comedian in the world." The producer, who signed Savo, later replaced him and in the resultant law suit one of his defenses was that Savo was not, as his enthusiastic agent had vowed, the "finest comedian in the world."

The suit was finally settled, but not before Lyons had disclaimed the quote. "All I said," the agent insisted, "was that Savo was such a hit in London that Windsor was sorry he didn't wait to see him perform there, before abdicating."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
